UNSUNG HEROES OF BORDEAUX ON SALE

CHATEAU BEYNAT CUVÉE LEONARD 2001 (Cotes de Castillon)

13.95 167.40

Here is a juicy, ripe and delicious Merlot dominant blend from the satellite region of Cotes de Castillon, which is renowned for its exceptional wine and great values. (4814)

CHATEAU CARVIN 2001 (Premieres Cotes de Bordeaux)

13.95 167.40

Red-berry fruits in harmony with light vanillin oak in the nose of this wine. The palate is round and structured, with lingering fruit flavours and soft oak tannins on the finish. The tannins will soften over the next 4 to 5 years and the wine will become more complex as it develops. (4804)

CHATEAU HAUT DU PEYRAT 2000 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye)

CHATEAU JOUANIN CUVÉE PRESTIGE 2000 (Cotes de Castillon)

11.49 137.88

Located along the right bank of the Dordogne River, Jouanin produces a charming wine that offers immediate pleasure due to its high proportion of Merlot. (4825)

CHATEAU LALANDE-POITEVIN 2000 (Bordeaux Superieur)

CHATEAU LASCAUX 2000 (Bordeaux Superieur)

CHATEAU MAISON NEUVE 2000 (Montagne St.-Emilion)

13.49 161.88

A superb combination of 60% Merlot, 30% Cabernet Sauvignon and 10% Cabernet Franc, this 2000 combines uncommon backbone with a framboise-scented nose, rich texture and an agreeable style. (4805)

CHATEAU MAURAC 2001 (Haut-Medoc)

16.95 203.40

This vineyard occupies the eastern part of a large gravel plateau where the old vines respond to the warmth of the gravel soil by becoming very concentrated. (4813)

CHATEAU MAYNE VIEIL 2001 (Fronsac)

Made from 90% Merlot and 10% Cabernet Franc, this Fronsac is well-structured with good concentration and elegant tannins. (4815)

CHATEAU ROQUEFORT 2001 (Bordeaux)

CHATEAU SARDY 2000 (Cotes de Bergerac)

9.95 119.40

Chateau Sardy is an old, Perigord-style stone house that is surrounded by ornate Florentine gardens. The wines are soft and pleasing with delicate strawberry fruit. (4827)

VIEUX CHATEAU LONDON 2000 (Medoc)

A large proportion of Cabernet Sauvignon gives a classic structure to this wine. Aged in oak for one year, it displays a good body, intense cassis and great harmony. (4831)

"A wine aficionado's paradise," this legendary Madison Avenue purveyor, once again the Survey's No.1 store in its category, is lauded for its "deep, deep selection" that while "strongest in high-end Bordeaux" (find "that double magnum of '82 Lafite-Rothschild") is "comprehensive" in all regions and price points, including nearly 400 options under $10; rest assured, "even if you don't look rich and want an inexpensive bottle of Beaujolais," the staff will be "helpful," but if you can't stop by, or are frustrated that only a "fraction of the bottles are on display," they "have a great Web site" and catalog, both of which include lots of accessories.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM THE POLICE CHIEF TO THE PEOPLE OF THE HAMPTONS

July 15, 2005

Greetings:

Tomorrow night, the Boys Harbor fireworks display is exploding over Three Mile Harbor. We look forward to a harbor filled with more than a thousand boats and five thousand revelers. It will be a wonderful time.

I am sure all of you were very disappointed two weeks ago when we had to cancel the Fourth of July Fireworks over Main Beach in East Hampton because of the nests of endangered birds there. I want to assure you that your police department is going to do everything it can to see to it that this does not happen tomorrow at Three Mile Harbor.

Of course I am not talking about the little piping plover bird nests. I am talking about sharks. As you probably know, Three Mile Harbor has for many years been a favorite nesting and feeding ground for the spotted grey nursing shark. Scientists have been in boats in the harbor to study them. And they have been the subject of features in magazines as diverse as Harpers, National Geographic and the Long Island Fisherman. It's fair to say that, although the sharks can be dangerous when not nursing, the harbor has become known for this beautiful animal, which, at twenty-eight feet, is only a few feet shorter than the Great White.

In any case, what you may not know is that the spotted grey nursing shark is now an endangered species. It has been heavily fished, especially by the Japanese, who consider them might damage their little ears. They are the only species of shark that have ears.

You should know, however, that for the past week, this police department has directed teams of volunteers from the Nature Conservancy, the New York State Fisheries, the East Hampton Power Squadron, the Peconic Land Trust and the East Hampton Trustees in a great herding operation designed to get the sharks out of Three Mile Harbor in time for the fireworks.

We have gone about this in several different ways. For one thing, we have every night been dropping bushels of raw clams from helicopters down into Gardiner's Bay just outside the harbor inlet. The nursing sharks in the Harbor, sniffing a good meal, have swum out through the inlet with the babies trailing behind, collected the clams, eaten some and distributed some to their broods, and then, around morning, tried to swim back in.

We have met them every time with a line of boats from the above organizations, whose crews have tried to block the inlet while at the same time banging pots and pans together and playing hip hop music on their marine radios.

a delicacy when broiled with garlic, teriyaki and seaweed. And so, we have to be very careful around the spotted greys who are unfortunately nursing in the harbor this month. And that means seeing to it that they are not startled by any loud noises, such as fireworks, that Decidedly feminine, unmistakably tank.

The new Tankissime watch. Cartier

Given the current climate in the Israeli - Palestinian conflict, some folks are concerned that East Hampton resident Steven Spielberg's new movie about the 1972 Munich Olympics will upset the apple cart. In the film a Mossad agent, to be played by Eric Bana, is dispatched to hunt down the Palestinian terrorists who kidnapped and assassinated eleven Israeli athletes. But Israeli actress Gila Almagor, who appears in the movie, says the movie will bolster Israel's image in the eyes of the world.

* * *

Don't get your hopes up that McDonalds' uniforms will be brought into this century anytime soon. Although there were rumors that Russell Simmons' Phat Pharm was in talks to design new "urban" style uniforms for the Golden Arches, Simmons, a dedicated vegan and animal rights activist vehemently denies any such deal, saying that he doesn't eat anything that runs away from him.

* * *

You may remember that, upon her exit from prison, Martha Stewart was wearing a poncho sewn for her by a fellow inmate. Well, it seems the producers of her daytime talk show are looking to turn the poncho into a national fad. They are looking to fill the studio audience of "Martha" with poncho-wearing fans.

The "Made With Love In Brazil" trunk show given by Mary Jane Marcasiano at the Beach Ambiance Gallery in Sag Harbor had the cool support of East End artists Eric Fischl, April Gornick, Ross Bleckner, Cindy Sherman, Dan Rizzie and Nicole Miller.

Dr. Alexander Covey has received congratulations from friends and colleagues for having been selected by the Castle Connolly Guide 2005 as "One of the Top Doctors in New York" based on an extensive survey of over 12,000 doctors and hospital leaders. This is the third consecutive year he has received this prestigious award. Dr. Covey is the Director of East End Laser Care with offices located in Southampton, Center Moriches, and Manhattan and specializes in cosmetic and laser surgery.

As the days have gone by, the nursing sharks have slowly begun to get the message. Fewer and fewer of them have re-entered the harbor. As a matter of fact, this past night, Thursday night, there was just one spotted grey nursing shark, a very large, very stupid and very ill tempered one, who still goes back with her brood every morning. I am sad to have to report that last night on her return, two volunteers from the Peconic Land Trust lost their lives while banging pots. The shark rammed and sank their boat. And then ate them.

We intend to try more extreme herding measures tonight, which I will get to in a moment. But if we fail, tomorrow night, when you take your boats out into the middle of

Three Mile Harbor to watch the fireworks, make it a point to stay away from both the inlet and the northwest corner of the Harbor, just beyond the water ski area. This is where this one particular shark has set up her underwater nursery, which is, fortunately, beyond the line at which the federal government regulations say you may not set off fireworks. In any case, you should also stay away from the direct path — which we have marked with buoys — which connect the inlet with that part of the harbor. If you do that, I am sure there will be no trouble.

As for tonight, we are requiring that all citizens stay clear of our operation in Three Mile Harbor. We have obtained a special hunting license based upon this particular shark's attack on the two environmentalists, and, together with units from several other police departments, intend to herd her with large nets into a corner of the Harbor, and have sharpshooters fire drug-laced darts into her that will put her to sleep.

While she's asleep, we will haul her up onto the back of a barge and take her out to a spot in the Atlantic known as the Grand Banks. There we will revive her with antidote-tipped darts and shower her with nearly forty tons of clams, obtained from the government surplus clam program through the courtesy and hard work of our Congressman, the Honorable Tim Bishop. As the Grand Banks is forty miles out, even a determined shark swimming at full speed — forget one recently drugged and full of clams — could not possibly reappear in the Harbor until at least noon the next day by which time the fireworks will long be over.

Depending upon the success of this operation, and whether or not, having taken her away from her brood, she decides to just abandon them, next week I might be writing to you again about the baby shark adoption program we have in the wings. These baby sharks make excellent pets. And as they grow to a certain size, the releasing of them out into the wild is an educational experience for children of all ages.

In any case, tomorrow night, when you get in your boats and anchor around the fireworks boat in front of the Boy's Harbor Camp, enjoy the show. We are NOT, repeat NOT, going to have a repeat of what happened for the Fourth of July at East Hampton Town Beach. Not while I am the Chief of Police.

Sincerely,
James Brody
Chief
Hamptons Police

Southampton's Chance to Celebrate Its Old Guard Heritage

By Dan Rattiner

The Parrish Art Museum will be leaving downtown Southampton. They have bought 14 acres of property on the Montauk Highway in Water Mill next to the DuckWalk Vineyard and it is there that, during the next three years, they intend to build a "major" regional museum. The announcement was made last Wednesday.

I won't go into the reasons why they have decided to leave downtown, except to say that they couldn't work things out with the Village of Southampton. The Village, it turns out, owns the hundred-year-old gallery building they are currently in. And though a rich donor recently arranged for the rambling hundred year old building next door that used to be the Rogers Memorial Library to become part of the Parrish complex, it didn't help enough.

The size and scope of the new museum the Parrish intends to build in Water Mill can best be understood by noting the number of square feet of the building they intend to put on that new site. It will be about 70,000 square feet, which is about one and a half times the size of the King Kullen in Bridgehampton. The Parrish has a magnificent collection of original art from the end of the nineteenth century, painted in Southampton and elsewhere in the region by William Merritt Chase, Childe Hassam, and Thomas Moran who were out here at that time. It is worth tens, even hundreds of millions of dollars. Yet it is hidden away in storage for lack of a viewing space. And thus the grand scheme.

An interesting question remains then, which is — what will happen to the existing Parrish Art Museum building, and to the adjacent former Rogers Memorial Library building?

The Village owns the Parrish. The Parrish owns the now vacant former library. And there they sit, side by side, occupying prime retail space on the west side of Jobs Lane.

Knock them down and make them into more

SPIES, SECURITY, PRESS FREEDOM AND KARL ROVE

By Dan Rattiner

New York Times reporter Judith Miller was sent off to jail this past week for refusing to reveal one of her sources. You can argue that three years ago she provided a disservice to this country by erroneously reporting from secret but supposedly reliable sources that the Iraqis had weapons of mass destruction. But refusing to reveal those sources is not what she is going to jail for. She is going to jail for refusing to reveal the name of someone who unmasked a C. I. A. operative. Needless to say, unmasking a C. I. A. agent endangers the life of that person.

The scenario is truly fascinating. In the run up to the war, there was one Presidential advisor, Joseph Wilson, who strongly opposed what the President was doing. He had been the advisor to Mr. Bush's father when he was President, and a former US Acting Ambassador to Iraq. Now he was a member of the current President's team, sent to Nigeria as a weapons inspector.

Probably the most hawkish advisor to President Bush at that time was Karl Rove. He still is. It is now clear that Rove bristled when opposed by Wilson. Rove apparently decided to take action, personally, against Wilson when Wilson began to talk to the press about how he opposed the war.

One month ago, columnist Robert Novak announced an exclusive. He said that he had been told by a reliable source that Valerie Plame is a C. I. A. operative. He said other reporters knew this. Valerie Plame is the wife of Joseph Wilson. Novak said this was a conflict.

The C. I. A. went ballistic after this newscast. So did Congress. There are, obviously, no circumstances in which you release the name of a C. I. A. operative. Congress appointed a special stores? What a horrible idea. The merchants in town would probably be very happy if these buildings became public spaces that might be a draw to bring business downtown. The Parrish has been able to do that up until now. I have an idea.

I think that what is now the Parrish should become a museum of relics from the great old summer colony of Southampton. The museum should tell the story of these wealthy people, the duPonts, the Astors, the Morgans, and all the other wealthy New Yorkers who built grand mansions here during the late nineteenth century and early twentieth. The railroad, which extended to Southampton in 1870 made it all possible. Suddenly, in an age of horses and carriages, it was possible to go to Pennsylvania Station and take a parlour car all the way out to the rustic and virtually inaccessible eastern end of Long Island for the summer. The trip would take just two hours, and servants would line up their carriages at the station to await the arrival of these privileged people, to help carry off luggage and sleeping children and all the rest. These people had nannies, footmen, cooks and other servants. The husbands had made their fortunes in shipping, coal and the railroads. And the air was pure and the ocean magnificent out in Southampton. What a place for the summer. Many of their descendants still live in the homes built more than a hundred years ago.

Another destination made possible by the railroad at that time became the summer colony of Newport. And if you go there today, you will find in the center of town an entire museum devoted to the tennis tournaments which were played there every year. There are old programs, rackets, automobiles, trophies, films, photographs, albums, furniture and clothing. Until Forest Hills came along, the U. S. Open was held in Newport every summer. The tennis museum, as it is called, is the focal point of downtown Newport. On the outskirts sit all the old summer mansions. It's a spectacular place. And incidentally, the building 66 Newtown Lane in East Hampton, directly across the street from Waldbaums, is a scaled down replica of this tennis building, built to half size.

What could be better for Southampton than to have the stories of these old Robber Barons (and others) in a museum in the very center of where it all happened? The history of the Shinnecock Golf Course could be told. The story of St. Andrews Dune Church, the Bathing Association and the Meadow Club could be told. It would give an absolutely stunning and unique flavor to downtown.

As for the Rogers Memorial Library building, it was donated to the Parrish for use as an "educational building." A revolving show of its extensive art collection on display in Water Mill could be held there. Keep in mind that these turn of the twentieth century paintings were done by this country's great Impressionists, who were paid to come out here by the wealthy summer people to give painting lessons to the wives and children of the community. The two buildings would work together.

When Anything Goes, Nobody Believes a Dan's Papers Hoax

By Dan Rattiner

Every so often over the years as I've run this newspaper, I have thought to liven things up by making something up. This week, for example, there is the lead story in the paper about the sharks we are trying to herd out of Three Mile Harbor so Boys and Girls Harbor can hold their fireworks display. It's pretty obviously made up.

But what I have been finding, more and more, is that the fantastic things I write which are intended as hoaxes are more and more beginning to resemble real life. So I make up a story. And people just think — wow — Dan's Papers got that story. We haven't been reading about it anywhere else. Good for them.

This is appalling to me. Are things really getting THAT bizarre? I guess they are. Two weeks ago, for example, I wrote a story about a Wall Street banker who supposedly climbed a cell phone tower at 8 o'clock one Saturday morning and then, up there, got vertigo. The fire department had to bring him down. What was he doing up there? Cell phone service at his house was terrible. He was trying to adjust the panels to make it better at his house, but worse at somebody else's house.

This story created not a ripple. If I had published it ten years ago, I guarantee you that people would be talking about it for the whole week that it was out. Not much going on in the Hamptons. How about THAT?

I was telling somebody about this new phenomenon the other night over dinner. He owns a marina.

"The other evening," he said, "a guy on one of our yachts found that his air conditioning had broken. He couldn't have that. Turned out it

THEM not have air conditioning."

Yes, it would be entirely possible for somebody to climb ninety five feet up a pole to try to adjust a cell phone panel. Absolutely.

Sometimes I write a hoax, or what I think will be a pleasurable hoax for people to enjoy, and then just hang onto it for a month or two, waiting for the right time to run it.

For example, currently, I have a story on file in my computer about a man with an ocean view who one day discovers that another man has bought the lot directly in front of him and built a house that blocks his view. After some discussions about an amount of money to be paid from one to the other, the two swap houses.

I wrote this story back in March when I had nothing else to write about. A month later, a man built a 12,000 square foot mansion on the brow of a hill on East Lake Drive in Montauk, but finds out to his horror after he has built it, that his new house is sitting lower on the hilltop than he thought and there is a three-year-old 8,000 square foot house just below him that now partially blocks his view. So he buys the three-year-old house, donates it to the fire department, and they burn the house down for him as a drill to train volunteers.

The interesting part of this story is how he came to block his own view. The view from the brow of the hill would not normally be blocked by the house below. But the house is so big that to get it to fit level on foundations on the hill, they had to lop off the top of the hill. And so it sits lower. And my hoax looks like plagiarism.

What Happened at the Southampton Bathing Corporation?

By Dan Rattiner

Around 3:15 last Saturday afternoon, a group of about thirty surfers were enjoying the swells just to the east of the private club known as the Southampton Bathing Association on Meadow Lane in that town. They have done this for years, either here or in other places, wherever the sandbars make the best conditions. On this particular day, part of the sandbar extended over into where the bathers from the club were swimming, and this caused a problem.

According to Don King, the manager of the Bathing Association, the swimming season had just opened and the rough waves had prevented them from putting in the barrels and ropes just yet, but the lifeguards were there and the people, mostly children, were swimming.

"That's when the surfers came over," King told me. "They were right in the thick of it with the swimmers. No leashes on their boards. It was very dangerous. Our lifeguards told them to move out."

Most of the surfers did. But six of them didn't. And, no matter how much the lifeguards yelled and blew their whistles, they could not get them to move.

Some of the surfers thought they saw ropes in their way and thought — this private club can't do that. Other surfers saw there were no ropes where in past years there had been and thought — they're not allowing them to swim yet. I can surf right in. For the most part, the surfers who did not move were teenagers.

After a while, several mothers on the shore panicked, took out their cell phones and called the police to save their babies. The police, thinking it was a shark attack, responded. King says that at the request of the lifeguards, the club management also called the police.

The police arrived. They walked down to the water's edge — all beaches in the entire town are owned jointly by Southampton residents —

by Joan Zandell

It was a balmy Sunday night in July, around ten o'clock. I'd been locked up with my writing all day and needed a breath of fresh air, someone to talk to and something cool to drink. I showered and changed and decided to go somewhere I'd never been before, The Cigar Bar, to see what if anything was happening.

In the life of the evening, I was told that it was early yet at The Cigar Bar. There were only about nine or ten people hanging out, smoking cigars and drinking quietly. I was greeted by an enthusiastic Perry, the bartender, a good-looking, happy young man with short cropped, bleached blond hair, an earring and a welcoming smile. I ordered a club soda and scouted the room for possible conversationalists.

Benjamin Smith, a striking Englishman approached me. I asked him whether he was a regular, to which he responded with a resounding, "YES!"

I asked him what it was about the Cigar Bar that he liked so much?

He said, "A lot of women come here. Eileen, the owner, is very nice. You can usually have a good night and um, sometimes take someone home."

Considering his looks and British accent, I didn't think he'd have a problem.

Next to him stood a blonde woman who was talking with some of Benjamin's friends. She introduced herself as Chef Sandesha. She works on the boat Useless, she said which docks at the harbor until Labor Day. With the exception of taking a tour of Nantucket, the boat plans to be there for the summer. Chef Sandesha used to live in the Hamptons but now has a fabulous job. The boat is based in Fort Lauderdale or the Bahamas in the wintertime. Sandesha returns to the Cigar Bar called out to the surfers endangering the bathers to come into shore. They did.

Tempers flared. One man, who was surfing with his teenage son, claimed that the club had no right to harass the surfers, as it was a beach for everybody. Somebody else said the club did not have the right to put up any ropes. The police handcuffed and drove off with one teenage surfer.

I spoke later to another surfer who had been on the scene when this incident happened. He asked me not to use his name. "I saw the whole thing. The police asked this one kid his name, he's a fourteen-year-old kid, and he refused to give it. He also refused to cooperate with them."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"He put his hands behind his back. So then they put handcuffs on him and led him away. I think he thought nobody could tell him what to do in the ocean. It's God's ocean."

"He forgot they can tell you what to do when you come ashore," I said.

King, the manager of the club, who is also a former surfer from these parts, said later that the surfers and bathers had always gotten along and would continue to get along, but the surfers couldn't be endangering the people who were swimming. He said the County Board of Health issues licenses to clubs requiring they have lifeguards and roped off areas. But other than that, everybody is free to share the ocean and the beach.

According to Lieutenant Lamston, the officer in charge of juveniles at the Southampton Village police department, "The boy was brought in and sat down here. Then we called his parents. And they came and got him. No charges were filed. This is a standard procedure for any juvenile who doesn't cooperate."

Lieutenant Lamson said he had no idea how the 911 people got to think this was a case of sharks, but he did say it was so indicated in the blotter.

The surfers told people at the scene that they would demonstrate against the club on the following Saturday, but the idea fizzled and nobody showed.

Surfing is on the books as illegal in certain more populated sections of the Village and this is one of them — but the law is almost never enforced.

night after night because, "I like that it breaks out into spontaneous parties. It's close to the docks so I can walk home. And the music is great!"

Looking around the room I notice that it is nearing eleven o'clock and the place is starting to fill up with what seem like people from every imaginable ethnic background, people who are anywhere from twenty-five to sixty-five, and they all appear incredibly happy to be there.

As I work my way around the room, I meet Nicholas Scherd. He has light blond hair and blue eyes, and looks a bit like a young version of Sting. He tells me he is also a Yachtie and a regular at The Cigar Bar,

"I come for the people, the bartender.....this is where all the Yachties are. We come for the women, we stay for the drinks."

Among the people now arriving are five elegant African American men who are ending their "Men's Retreat Weekend" with drinks and cigars. They are childhood friends who grew up together in New York City but now live as far away as London and Hong Kong. The ringleader and only local among them,

A Birth on the Front Lawn of a Home on Lily Pond Lane

By Dan Rattiner

Ted Kheel, the labor negotiator, called me this morning.

"I wonder if you would come by," he said. "There's somebody here I would like you to meet. But he has to leave by noon."

Ted Kheel has been an advisor to four Presidents. He often has fascinating friends over. I told him I would be over in about a half hour. Who could it be?

Ted lives on a small dead end road off Lily Pond Lane in East Hampton. I was on the phone on my way over there — I have an earpiece so I can talk hands free — and I was talking with one of my sons about lasers and light beams among the planets. I turned onto his road, which goes a hundred yards to dead end at the back of the beach, and I made a right at the narrow gravel driveway that goes into Kheel's property. It is one lane wide, cuts across the neatly mown front lawn and is designed as a horseshoe in from the street, going along in front of the house, and then back out to the road further down toward the dead end.

As I drove in, I saw there were a series of stone sculptures on the right side of this gravel driveway. The first showed some kind of eruption in the lawn. The second and third showed a smooth dome shape in the middle of the eruption slowly rising. And the fourth showed this thing fully born — a smooth, stone sphere about four feet in diameter, with the peeled remains of its birth arrayed around it.

"Hmmm," I thought. "It's a planet." I also thought, "This is the first time I've ever seen anything on Ted's front lawn." But then I thought that recently, I've begun to see lots of sculptures placed here and there on private property.

I parked, lifted the metal knocker on the front door, and banged twice. Then I was let in. Shortly, Ted came in from the next room, along with a dazzlingly handsome man with a great

MURDER IN THE HAMPTONS ON LIFETIME

By Dan Rattiner

Boy. I can't wait to see "Murder in the Hamptons." I hear the book was amazing and the movie should be even better. —ezbabe42 on the LIFETIME website.

We watched the Made for Television movie "Murder in the Hamptons" on the Lifetime Channel last night. The plot is real. Although billed as fiction, it is a virtual documentary of the murder of financier Ted Ammon in East Hampton in October of 2001. And the story, as I am sure you know, is so incredible that nobody could possibly believe it. So they actually had to tone it down for the movie they've made from this event. As Poppy Montgomery, who stars as Generosa Ammon, says, it's a made for television movie. So you can't do much. No swearing, no brutal bludgeoning, no sex.

It's pretty cheesy and unrealistic is what it is. Which is exactly the reality of the case. It is so cheesy and unrealistic that those who made this film just assembled some moderately well known TV actors, threw them together in a mansion for the interior scenes, and then took them up to Canada for the exteriors where it's a whole lot cheaper to film than here in America, and the Hamptons look, well, like

Canada on the one day in summer when the weather is nice and when the black flies haven't arrived yet. So it's really not about the Hamptons. Or the Hamptons WE know, anyway. (Could they do VENICE in Canada?)

Having said all that, I have to say that this tale, told simply and in a straightforward manner, rises well above the humdrum, largely due to the excellent performances of the three main characters in the piece. These performances stay with you. David Sutcliffe (of "I'm With Her") plays Ted Ammon, a decent, handsome, winsome Wall Street millionaire who shock of white hair. This was the guest. Ted introduced me.

"This is Pal Svensson," Ted said. "He's a world renowned sculptor from Sweden."

Aha, I thought.

Ted had met Pal (pronounced Paul) at this year's Biennale at Adelphi University here on Long Island. Pal was one of the participants. Fascinated by the man's work, Ted said he had this lawn and if Pal wanted to ship one of his sculptures to him and he liked it, he'd buy it. He'd pay all expenses. (I tried to imagine the 'planet' I had seen, which I learned weighs 1,200 pounds, put into a crate and put aboard a 747, or more likely, I guess, a boat. They ship Saabs here, after all.)

We all sat down in the living room and talked for a while. Pal is the son of a forester in Sweden who came to own a large undeveloped forest in the north of that country. Pal and his family would go there in the summertime, and Pal would play and explore this vast property, spending time in the woods, underbrush and gorges and, in particular, the remarkable prehistoric black stone that eons ago was pushed up from deep within the earth when the planet was formed. This stone, from this section of Sweden known as Bohuslan, is the densest, heaviest stone on the surface of the planet. And it is what Pal uses to make his creations, which are often to be seen in public spaces in towns and cities throughout Sweden and elsewhere.

The work, which is showcased in a hard covered book — Pal autographed a copy to me — shows stoneworks — some of it carved (with diamond cutting equipment), some of it raw, interfacing with water and light.

I was particularly struck by a work of two enormous upright pillars that sit on the main walkway just in front of a hospital in Malmo, Sweden. They almost touch, creating a vertical gap between them, which harbors a waterfall, the water filling the gap, and splashing along the gap in the pillars into a small pool below.

"You can see through the space between the pillars," Pal said, "and the space is oriented east and west. Hospital workers walk up the path in the morning heading east and they see the rising sun through this space, bathed with the water. And when they go home at the end of the day, they go down the path and watch the sun through the water as they head west for their bicycles."

Pal has designed and installed stoneworks in hundreds of public spaces, more than a dozen in Stockholm, and others in places as diverse as Gothenburg, Falkenberg, Malmo, Skovde and Kristensted, Denmark. Many of them have serious interplays of water, stone and light. Others are made of bronze, granite, steel and/or wood.

We walked out the front door to the sculpture arrangement which Ted has now purchased, and he asked me for my interpretation of the work.

"As I drove up," I said, "I saw it as a sequence. A planet being born from the center of the earth."

"Some people see it as an interplay between nature and culture," Pal said. "The smoothness of culture emerging from the roughness of nature. Or looked at the other way, culture being swallowed up by nature."

"You can't look at it the other way," I said. "This is the IN part of the driveway. Nobody goes the other way, because of the dead end."

"He has something similar where it goes the other way," Ted said, smiling.

"You asked me," I said. "And it's a planet being born. I see it as all nature. Planets are smooth and spherical, though up close you have mountains and canyons and so forth. It's a matter of scale."

"That's true," Pal said.

"You also have the moon. And the sun. Spherical."

"It's an interpretation."

"But I can see what you are talking about. And I'm sure there are other interpretations. It's just, I think, that I was talking on the phone with somebody about planets and other celestial objects when I drove up. So that was my frame of reference. But I really like the work."

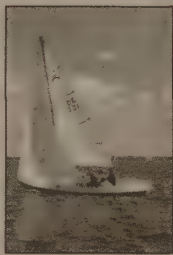

And I surely did.

"What do you think of the FIFTH piece?" Pal asked. Across the driveway, ten feet away from the final birth piece, there was a twisting vertical black panel seven feet high. I hadn't even noticed it.

Ted Kheel is inviting about fifty of his friends over for a reception to meet Pal Svensson a week from Saturday. We shall see what other interpretations there are. •

Riverhead Rising

Owners of Southampton Inn Plan Riverside Hotel in Flanders

By Jerry Cimisi

Dede Gotthelf, owner of the Southampton Inn, has put together an ambitious development called Riverside on the Southampton side of the Southampton-Riverhead border. In a recent interview she related, "It was inspired by something Dan Rattiner had written four years ago — about what the Hamptons need is clones of itself with less traffic. That's what I've tried to put together."

Fronting Route 24 (which runs north from Montauk Highway to Riverhead), the Riverside development — on 20 acres of currently vacant land — would be immediately south of the traffic circle, just before you get to Main Street, Riverhead. The rear of the development would extend to the Peconic River.

"There would be three separate developments," said Ms. Gotthelf. "An inn with 107 rooms (that would be the sibling to the Southampton Inn); a 16,000 square foot office building that can be used for restaurant and retail; and 40 condo units with one and two bedroom suites overlooking the river."

The "sibling" to the Southampton Inn, which Ms. Gotthelf has owned for the past eight years, would have a ballroom, meeting rooms, a children's play area, and a catering facility.

Again, although this is a stone's throw from

Main Street, Riverhead, the Riverside development is south of the river and thus in the boundaries of Southampton Town. Ms. Gotthelf said there is an application pending for a change of zoning. "Right now the land is zoned for any of four uses: business, residential, highway business, resort waterfront business. We're seeking to change it to resort development."

An Environmental Impact Statement (EIS)

Southampton and obviously we'd directly bring more people into the immediate Riverhead area. It would be a boon for downtown." Ms. Gotthelf, who has summered in Hampton Bays much of her life, said, "I remember when I was 13 and went into Riverhead to buy my first bikini. It was a hot place to go on a cloudy day in the summer. Riverhead has come back to that; the downtown has really been revitalized."

Dede Gotthelf spoke about the traffic concerns such a project might create. "More people would come to the area, yes, but think of it this way: instead of driving down to the South Fork, to the North Fork, the Riverhead area would be their destination."

She added that the traffic problem on the East End "is already flunking," and any impact Riverside would have on it "would be minor."

Riverside, a $32-million project, developed under the auspices of River Catwalk, LLC, which Ms. Gotthelf heads, plans to break ground in the first quarter of 2006 in order to be open for the season of 2007. It might have already been in place if not for some glitches along the way.

Ms. Gotthelf, who describes herself as the has been completed and is under consideration by the town. On June 28 there was a public hearing on Riverside; there will be a second hearing on July 24. Ms. Gotthelf said there has been great support from both Southampton Town and Riverhead. ("Though I wish Riverhead would let us in their sewer district," she added.)

"There would be increased tax revenue for sort of developer who takes on projects most developers wouldn't touch because of their complexity, said that the property had been purchased in 2001 from a local family; the original plan was to have Riverside up and running in time for golf's 2004 Open at Shinnecock.

"But in October, 2001, the New York State Department of Transportation condemned four and half acres in order to put in a recharge basin for Route 24," Gotthelf said. The plans had to be redrawn. Two years later, in November 2003, Southampton Town had the wetlands boundary resurveyed; the result was that the wetland border grew by 100 feet on the southeast side of the project. Once again, the plans had to be altered.

Naturally, Dede Gotthelf hopes this is the last obstacle to the project. She sees the economic benefits to the area as a big plus that will help push it through. She said, "Over a ten year period we calculate there will be 50,000 to 60,000 people coming through our doors and of course this will provide many more jobs for the area."

In closing Ms. Gotthelf said, "This couldn't have been done without the Brearley School in New York City and Williams College in Massachusetts," institutions that Ms. Gotthelf attended and which she says "gave their graduates education, courage, and the ability to think outside the box."

It was also learned that Matthew Cooper of Time Magazine also had been told who the source was. Before Congress, neither Cooper or Miller would say who that source was.

In the past, judges have sentenced reporters to jail for not revealing sources as a "contempt" proceeding. The law is very odd about this. The vast majority of States have laws shielding reporters from being punished for refusing to reveal their sources. How would anyone feel they could tell a member of the press anything? As a result, judges use a "contempt" provision, in which they have to power to jail someone almost indefinitely. As long as it appears that this someone might see the error of their ways, the jailing can go on. If in jail, someone sticks to his ground and continues to say he will refuse to follow the judge's order, you have to let him go. After all, no crime has been committed. But it is the judge who decides when the jailing should be terminated. (This is

AMERICA?)

In the current case, the New York Times, Time Magazine and others have fought this all the way up to the Supreme Court, which reaffirmed these current laws. At that point, the publisher of Time Magazine decided to reveal the source of the leak.

It was Karl Rove.

The only explanation that makes any sense about this is that Karl Rove unmasked Valerie Plame because he wanted to get back at her husband, Joseph Wilson. Wilson says that has to be the reason. Rove is not talking.

Will columnist Robert Novak go to jail? That remains to be seen. Why did Judith Miller go to jail? It's not that she ever wrote anything about the C. I. A. agent. It's that she was called up to testify about what she knew on the topic and stood on the principle of not revealing her source.

Given that everybody knows the whole story now, it seems ridiculous for her to stand on this principle in this particular case. This is hardly about whistleblowing or corruption. It's about a mean-spirited right wing hawk who deliber-

Art Barge

How Two New York City Artists Created History in Napeague

By Emily J Weitz

Countless times I've hopped in my car, lowered the windows, and cruised down the Napeague Stretch towards Montauk, silently checking in with the familiar landmarks that dot the way. The first of these landmarks, emerging steady from the steely blue water, is a giant, stoic barge. Inside it are canvases, clay, and colors. Inside are artists and amateurs. Inside is a unique history that has become a legacy. What is this motionless battleship encased in windows? It's the Art Barge, and it is unique in the world.

To find out how exactly the Art Barge came to be, I had to snake down the winding Cranberry Hole Road and weave in and out of weathered beach huts. I came to a grey house, perched in the dunes and overlooking Napeague Harbor. Out front was a sign that read "The Mabel and Victor D'Amico Studio and Archive."

Before arriving at this beautiful home, a work of art in itself, I would never have guessed that the Art Barge was really the creative dream of one or two individuals. It is too grand to have been hatched from the brain of one man, I would think. But when I stepped out of my car and encountered translucent colors of fused glass dangling from a piece of worn driftwood, when I walked down a pebble path to pass a mosaic of broken shells and pottery, I realized the Art Barge could indeed be the vision of only one or two special individuals.

Victor D'Amico was the founder of the Art Barge. He was a true teacher who believed in the creative potential of every man, woman, and child. He was the Director of Education at the Museum of Modern Art from 1937 until 1970, and he brought innovative and exciting educational programs to the museum. In the early years of their marriage, Victor and his wife Mabel lived in the city, but they started coming out to Long Island, as many of us do, for the space and the inspiration. In 1955, MoMA sponsored outdoor summer painting classes at Ashawagh Hall in Springs.

Newspapers around the country showed images of the well-dressed New Yorkers at their easels in the sunshine. As successful as the classes were, Victor wanted a venue that better suited the character of the area.

When Victor discovered that a retired World War II Navy barge rested abandoned in a harbor in New Jersey, his dream began to materialize. Only an artist could transform a warship into a creative studio space, and that's just what Victor did. He bought the barge for $500, and had it towed all the way from New Jersey, under the Hell's Gate Bridge, into the Long Island Sound, to the Napeague Harbor.

At first, Victor and Mabel thought they would build their house on the plot of land in front of which the barge dropped anchor, but they decided that "the ocean was monotonous," and they bought a plot of land a short bicycle ride away, through the dunes. The landscape out their wall of windows is unique – beyond the dunes is blue water, out of which jut a few small islands, with Gardiner's Island in the back drop and the North Fork on the horizon.

The first summer they spent in East Hampton, the couple camped out on the land under beams and a tarp. They were artists; they could improvise. The house was built to fit them, two smallish people with a great need for natural light and inspiration. As the years unfolded, the house grew around them. Mabel mounted an oar on the wall to use as a banister. She had a hot tub installed in between wide open windows because she wanted to "soak in her old age." I feel like after walking through the greenhouse, where Mabel's trees wait patiently for her return, pausing in the kitchen, where each mug is on display and no cupboards hide anything away, I know this couple. Their house is a testament to their personalities. Mabel's fused glass necklaces hang from golf tees on the wall. Every little perfume bottle she ever received makes rainbows in the windows.

While both Mabel and Victor were artists, when they moved out East full time in 1970 Mabel retired from her position as head of the District Art Departments in Rye, NY. She then had more time to devote to her sculpture, glasswork, painting, clothing making, and creating. Victor was busy teaching at the Art Barge. His philosophy, around which he gave birth to the Art Barge, was that you couldn't teach cubism or impressionism by lecturing: you had to teach by getting into a studio and applying the practices of cubism or impressionism to the canvas. He believed that the beauty of modern art was that it was not just a depiction of reality, but it was movement and philosophy.

Victor started programs at MoMA and the Art Barge for veterans of wars, beginning with World War II veterans. He thought that art could help to "free them from destructive acts" by inspiring them to create.

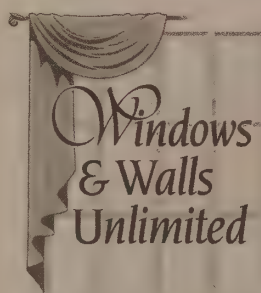

Over the years, the Art Barge has expanded in physical size and in reputation. And the heritage that Victor and Mabel left behind since their deaths has continued to flourish. The Art Barge still offers a wide array of classes from June until September, including watercolor, sculpture, and photography, all located on the fantastic floating studio that was Victor's dream.

As a 50th Anniversary celebration of the Art Barge, there will be a special benefit on Saturday, July 23, from 5-8 p.m. at Ashawagh Hall, the place where it all began. At the benefit will be cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, and an exhibit showing the history of the Art Barge. There will also be an auction of artistic time-pieces, for which various local artists were given the mechanical piece of a clock and asked to create the face around it.

Even with the loss of its fantastic parents, the Art Barge still works. The inherent inspirational quality of a studio on the water, along with the character that was fostered by two loving founders and the generations of artists that followed, is a gem unique to the Hamptons, and its legacy lives on.

For more information on the Art Barge or on the benefit on July 23, call 267-3172.

By Emily J Weitz

Yoga class is a time for self-reflection, a time to achieve personal goals, a time to let go of judgment and accept the beauty in oneself. This is easier to do when you're not standing on your head across from Christy Turlington.

I saw her across a dimly lit yoga studio in Amagansett, and without even realizing she was in fact the supermodel herself, I was stricken by the natural beauty of this woman. I am not usually one to stare, but the glow that emerges from her, even when she's upside down in a headstand, is magnetic. Christy Turlington is one of the most successful supermodels in the world, with a diverse beauty that has allowed her to represent the spectrum of fashion names, from the natural look of Maybelline to the glam look of Versace.

But of course, Christy came into the world unassumingly, with no idea that the delicate sloping of her cheekbones or the deep green of her eyes was going to carry her into the spotlight. Christy was born on January 2, 1969 in San Francisco, CA. Her father was a pilot and her mother a flight attendant for Pan-American Airways. Her mother is El Salvadorian and her father American. Christy grew up with her two sisters and her parents, and developed a passion for horses at a young age. Her athletic father, a man with three little girls, encouraged her competitive side, and she started competing on the local level. She became more involved with horseback riding, training after school every day. By her mid-teens, though, she was discovered on horseback by photographer Dennie Cody, who immediately saw the modeling potential in Christy. Her parents were reluctant to allow her to join a world of such high standards and such fast-paced living, but they eventually gave their consent. Christy was hired by a local agency, where she began to work after school and on weekends. She was no more than 15 at the time, but she was making a hundred dollars per hour for the Emporium Capwell Chain.

Her face was in the magazines now, and the opportunities were multiplying. Word spread like wildfire, and soon talent agencies in New York heard about the "budding new talent." Eileen Ford, of the prestigious Ford Modeling Agency, offered young Christy a contract in the Blond, and brunettes were beginning to get more attention as fashion and beauty icons. Even after her first failed stint in Europe, Eileen Ford refused to give up on Christy. She sent the 16-year-old to New York to photograph at some of the most notable magazines. At this time, she appeared in American Vogue for the first time. Before pursuing the opportunities that this coverage gave her, Christy went back to finish high school in California. Then, in 1987, she got her big break into the professional modeling world, when Italian Vogue chose her to be on the cover. Christy was 18.

Paris. The photographs from this trip turned out to be a failure, and Christy tasted her first

By this time, Christy Turlington had become a household name, and she was among the first generation of supermodels as we know them today. She, along with Linda Evangelista, Claudia Schiffer, Naomi Campbell, and Cindy Crawford, was sought after to be the cover model for all sorts of magazines and beauty products. In 1989, she signed an exclusive contract with Calvin Klein to represent Eternity fragrances. These provocative ads seemed to be everywhere, and Christy's face graced households as well as runways.

In 1993, Christy became immortalized at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, when 120 mannequins were produced to replicate her facial features.

Once her career was secure, Christy wanted to pursue her education. She attended UCLA and the Gallatin School at NYU, where she majored in Philosophy and Literature, specializing in Eastern Philosophy. Hence the yoga class.

When she graduated in 1999, Christy started her own ayurvedic skincare line called Sundari, which means "beautiful woman" in Hindu.

Christy Turlington married her first husband, screenwriter Roger Wilson, in a Buddhist ceremony in the 90s, and after they split, she had a high profile relationship with actor Jason Patric. These relationships ended "for the right reasons," according to her sister Kelly.

In 1997, Christy's father died of lung cancer, and she became devoted to the American Cancer Society signing a contract with ABC TV to do a documentary on Women and Smoking. This is just one of the many causes that Christy has taken upon herself, along with the American Foundation for El Salvador, an association that drop of rejection when she was hastily dismissed.

Upon her return to the United States, she saw that there was a new emergence of supermodels like Linda Evangelista and Cindy Crawford. The sun was setting on the Era of ately leaked something to get back at somebody, with potentially deadly consequences. If that can be proven, then it is Rove who should go to jail. That is the story.

As recent events have shown, once again, we are at war with a group of people who kill civilians for sport in the hopes it will have an effect on government behavior. I recently wrote about the Nazi terrorists who landed in Amagansett in 1942 bent on wreaking a similar havoc. I see nothing wrong with what the great Democrat and very liberal President Roosevelt did at the time. Once these terrorists were caught, he denied them a trial under American civilian law. He gave them a military trial. And before it began, he told his generals that, as Commander in Chief, he wanted them put to death. With only two exceptions, they complied.

I consider myself a liberal. I vigorously opposed the invasion of Iraq, which I considered provocative and pointless. I wrote a series of articles to that effect at the time. But some of our freedoms, precious as they might be, have to take a back seat during wartime. It's not forever. During World War II, they had "wartime measures." When World War II ended, freedoms were restored. And so therefore I see nothing wrong with Guantanamo for people who cut off heads in front of a video camera.

Karl Rove

Judith Miller may emerge in three months — that is the length of her sentence because that's when the judicial term ends — as a darling of the left. But she performs a disservice to her cause in this case. For those not familiar with the complexity of this story, it just looks like secret source not revealed, reporter jailed, Time Magazine gives up, everybody keep your mouth shut when talking to a reporter. It does not at all look like National Security, the endangerment of an operative and the vindictiveness of a right-winger.

Standing on principle in this case serves no purpose whatsoever. This should have been the exception to the rule.

gives aid to the small country that was her mother's homeland. She also represents animal rights as a contributor to PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) and breast cancer (Fashion Targets Breast Cancer).

She and Producer/Writer/Director Ed Burns met out here in the Hamptons at a party in the summer of 2000, and after a whirlwind romance, they were engaged. However, after the intensity of September 11, 2001, they postponed their wedding. They split for about 7 months, but reunited and, in June of 2003, they were married in California, with rocker Bono standing in for Christy's late father. In November of 2003, the beautiful couple was blessed with a baby girl named Grace.

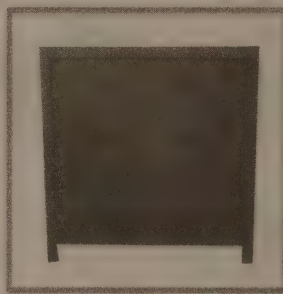

Meanwhile, even while Christy's personal life was booming with excitement, she managed to keep her work a priority, though that work certainly switched gears. Instead of devoting her time to strutting her stuff on the runway — where she always felt "silly... pretending [she] had an attitude..." — she threw herself into her first book, titled Living Yoga: Creating a Life Practice.

Christy and Ed share a house in Springs, and from the healthy glow that shines from her as she sits in full lotus position, it seems that she is perfectly happy to Be Here Now.

Who's Here

By Oliver Peterson

James Frey loves living on the highway. "The traffic's never bad at night, and the noise is actually sort of nice," he said of his home near Amagansett. He'd just returned from an over two-week-long tour, with 13 stops, in 10 cities, from New York to LA, to promote his new book, My Friend Leonard. "The tour was good. I had big crowds, sold lots of books, it was very gratifying. The worst thing in the world..... is showing up to a reading and having an empty room. It didn't happen at all this time. I set the record in six of thirteen stores." Frey seemed relaxed and happy to be home. He wears a thick beard, short curly hair, and casual clothes. When asked about setting a record at BookHampton, he said, "Hopefully. It's my hometown store." Frey will be completing his tour there, with one final reading, on Saturday July 16th.

If you haven't heard of James Frey, or read about him recently in Newsweek, or seen his face on the cover of Poets and Writers magazine, or read the serialized version of his new book in GQ, or read the sparkling reviews in Kirkus and Publishers Weekly, you will. Frey's first book, A Million Little Pieces, published in 2003, hit the shelves to a maelstrom of press and PR. The memoir chronicling his painful recovery from a near fatal addiction to crack, alcohol and huffing solvents, was praised and disparaged with universally extreme reactions from both sides. The writing left out hindrances like quotation marks and traditional sentence structure for a fast-paced style that was absolutely unique to James Frey. In his own words, Frey's "unapologetic ambition.....to try to be an important cultural figure.....one of the most widely read, most influential, most important writers of [his] time" left some angry or intimidated, and others believing he might just accomplish his dream. The book was a finalist for several major awards, was an international bestseller published in 35 countries, reached the bestseller lists of the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, and the San Francisco Chronicle, and earned the title of Amazon.com's #1 Best Book of 2003.

My Friend Leonard begins where A Million Little Pieces left off. James has completed rehab, finishes a brief stint in jail for crimes committed before his transformation to sobriety, and is ready to reunite with his girlfriend, Lily. He is also eager to reconnect with Leonard, a mob boss he met, like Lily, in rehab. Leonard and James forged a strong friendship while getting sober, and the mobster's parting words to him were a promise to make James his son. Things take a tragic turn, and the bulk of the book recounts the equally heartbreaking and heartwarming story of James' struggles to fall back in to place with the world, and his uncanny friendship with this amazing man during the trying times of early sobriety.

The "characters" are of course real people, with real meaning in Frey's life.

Leonard was, in many ways, a guardian angel to James during those years. He helped him stay in rehab when he was ready to leave, and was always there for the hard times that followed. Frey takes those lessons with him in his new life of fame and success. He has helped friends get published and makes an effort to respond and be open to the many letters and questions from his fans. Without noticing the irony, Frey said, "This old gangster, Myer Lansky, had a saying that he lived his life by. It was, Be a friend, help a friend. That's a good saying." He swallowed the last bite of a Slim Jim. It's good to see a man who isn't too famous for processed meat. "The people who read my books pay my bills, and there's no reason not to be good to them and there's no reason not to interact with them and be respectful of them. I'm never going to be one of those guys who hides from them or doesn't appreciate it. When I do book signings, I sign every book. Personalize every book. If people can spend the money and look at what I do, I can take two minutes to sign their book, answer their questions."

With the new book and the tour, Frey has also launched BigJimIndustries.com, a web site where he posts regular updates about his daily life, information and press—good and bad—about his books, a bio, pictures, and hosts a message board that sees frequent action from fans. It is here that he is able to answer many of the questions. The contents of Frey's books are so deeply personal, he does so much baring of his soul, that readers can feel that they in some way have lived his life and endured his pain right alongside him. Message board commentary swings from speculation about which actors will star in the film version of AMLP, to be shot in the fall, to inquiries about where the graves of certain "characters" from his books reside. The "characters" are of course real people, with real meaning in Frey's life. He chooses not to answer these, but takes them in stride. "Part of the point of the books is to write like nobody has ever written before, and to bare my soul in a way, with words, that nobody has ever done. And to move people in a way that they've never been moved.....and I understand why people ask me very intimate questions. There are certain things I won't answer.....because they don't need to know. I can decide what to reveal about myself, but I respect other people's anonymity."

Most of My Friend Leonard was written here on the East End from last July to November. Frey and his wife, Maya, found themselves in Amagansett visiting a friend and fell in love with our community. He's a huge lover of art

— he has a Picasso, a Matisse, and a Damien Hirst among others — and feels a connection to local cultural history, from Pollock to Steinbeck. Frey has visited the painter's grave at Green River Cemetery, and likes the idea of joining the long tradition of Hampton writers. "Like Pollock, I want my work to be instantly recognizable and impossible to copy." They rented in the winter first, to see what it's really like here and to become as local as newcomers can be. It was a fit for the Freys, and they recently bought a home near the friend that brought them here. "It's beautiful. It's mellow. It's a slow, simple life when it's not the summer," he said.

He and Maya recently had their first child, but despite rumors, a book about the experience won't happen. James Frey is finished writing about himself. He's completed new introductions to two Henry Miller books for a British publisher, he's written screenplays including Kissing A Fool and the film version of his first book, essays on art and literature, a television show, the text for a photography book, American Pit Bull, and his best selling memoirs. My Friend Leonard is #17 on the New York Times list as of press time. Right now, James Frey is here to "chill" and plans to begin a new novel soon that he hopes will be "absolutely revolutionary. I might pull it off. And I think I'm going to," he said.

James Frey will be reading from and signing his new book, My Friend Leonard, at BookHampton in East Hampton on Saturday, July 16th at 5:30 p.m.

named Adam, says, "I love the Cigar Bar because I enjoy the music and it's a place where I can relax and have a cigar." He goes on, "It's like the UN in here. There are white South Africans, Danes, Swedes, Germans, Argentines, any night of the week. The women are incredible. Whether they are 25 or 65, they are beautiful. Last night, there was a sixty-year-old woman in here who was the most beautiful woman in the room. It's a really eclectic crowd. You can meet psychoanalysts and their wives early on in the evening, or the people off the boats, and then between two and three in the morning you get everyone from everywhere else that has closed. Come to think of it, the most interesting woman I've met in here was a doctor."

The place is starting to really buzz now, and people are semi-dancing in their places, just grooving to the great dance music. Every so often, Perry the bartender looks up and shouts above the music, "I DON'T KNOW WHY I LOVE IT, BUT I DO!"

Sunday night for Yachties is like Friday night for regular folks, since Sunday is the beginning of their weekend. I sidle up to the bar. There is a cool looking couple just drinking and chatting and grooving to the music. The woman is Sara Doyle, an attractive, full-time resident of Sag Harbor who works in a gallery. She has just returned from a week away. "I love this place. It's super, super vibrant."

Her partner, the strong silent type with chin length blond hair, is motioning with his hands that he's here because he likes to smoke! Sara Doyle leans over and, seemingly smitten, she whispers in my ear, "The first time I met him, he was dancing on the bar."

Next to them is a tall, Jamaican man with long dreadlocks, a cap, and a sensational smile.

I tap him on the shoulder; he looks at me shyly as I ask him whether he's a regular.

"Yes," he says. "This is a grown-up place where you can have good conversations with people about anything."

Standing next to him is Joshua, a certified teacher of Tantra. His friend Richard is his student. Joshua encourages him to ask to massage Chef Sandesha's feet. She agrees, and now, in addition to people moving to the music, talking and joking, there's a Tantric massage happening in the middle of the room. Joshua says he wants to see if his student is doing it right. Convinced that he's done a good job of teaching him, the session ends as spontaneously as it began.

As it gets closer to midnight, Chris, a man of stature and girth who happens to be the official host of the Cigar Bar, enters. Everyone

Stewart Lester, 68

By Debbie Tuma

One of the great fishing legends of the Hamptons, Stewart Lester, died on July 4, in a tragic accident on the water. Lester, 68, was doing what he loved best—fishing, when he accidentally slipped overboard near Gardiner's Island, and was hit by his own boat, as, pilotless, it circled around.

One witness to the accident, Brian Smith of East Hampton, who was out on his own boat when he saw the accident, tried to help Lester, who was in the water, but it was too late. Smith radioed for help, and was soon joined by the State DEC patrol boat, which helped to lift Captain Lester aboard and continued CPR. At the Montauk Coast Guard Station, Lester was quickly transported to the Montauk Ambulance, which took him to Southampton Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Lester, of Springs, comes from a long line of fishermen, and was born in Amagansett in 1936. His father, Theodore Roosevelt Lester, was a successful haulseiner. Over the years, growing up in Amagansett, Stewart Lester fished with his father, joining him aboard Elisha Ammon's "Russell S," to fish for cod. Over his fishing career, Lester did every kind of fishing, from pinhooking, to haulseining, to dragging flounder, and lobstering. In 1969, he and his father built their 43-foot boat, called "Posey" in Maine. Following this boat, which proved too slow, Lester got a second, faster boat, the 59-foot steel "Sailfish." After the offshore lobstering died out, Lester set lobster pots in the area bays.

Being so active in the bays, and doing so many types of fishing, Lester was a former member of the East Hampton Town Baymen's Association and also of the Long Island Fishermen's Association.

"Stewart was a very knowledgeable fisherman who knew everything about the bays, and was always willing to share his information with others," said Tom Knobel, a fellow bayman and also a member of the East Hampton Town Trustees.

review: david s. reynolds

By Joan Zandell

In Phillip Appleman's generous introduction to David S. Reynolds, at the Bridgehampton Library's Live at Five writer's series this past Friday afternoon, he said, "If you read John Brown, Abolitionist, you'll gain a better understanding of our national experience." That said, David Reynolds launched into some background about his current hero.

"The story goes that at the age of twelve, John Brown, who had been brought up a Calvinist by a strict father, witnessed a slave boy being beaten by a man with a shovel. The experience so distressed him that he decided there and then to destroy slavery." Many historians, including Mr. Reynolds, believe that the basis for his outrage lay in the Calvinist interpretation of the Golden Rule, and the mutual respect implicit in 'treating another as oneself.' It would seem that John Brown had developed egalitarian values long before they became popular in the 1960s and 70s.

John Brown was actually very much liked and respected by his Native American as well as African American neighbors. "He had befriended Native Americans as a child and was presumed to speak their language," said Mr. Reynolds. "He loved living among Blacks and thought nothing of admitting them to his table and addressing them by the formal Mister. John Brown believed in treating every man the same way."

Historians have speculated that John Brown's sympathy for the downtrodden had manifested as a result of his many failed business ventures. But during the pre-Civil War period it was not unusual to attempt many ways of making a living before finding one's niche. (The 1830s were a time of economic depression and even John James Audubon failed at many entrepreneurial attempts before finding his way.)

John Brown had twenty children by two wives, one of whom died, unsurprisingly, in childbirth. It seems he was as passionate about his family as he was about his religion and politics. Only eight out of the twenty outlived him, several choosing to die by his side in his fight against slavery.

By the 1850s The Dread/Scott decision had solidified slavery in the South and most Southerners saw slavery as something quite wonderful. Considering the state of the economy and the fact that they needed hands to work their plantations, for them, slavery worked. To justify their position, they said that blacks should be grateful for the opportunity to be "saved."

John Brown, a deeply religious man, would have none of it; he saw slavery as pure evil. And to put his point of view into action he went to Kansas to insure that state would be anti-slavery.

"In Kansas, people were coming over from Missouri on voting days to terrorize the locals and intimidate them into choosing pro-slavery politicians," said Mr. Reynolds, "Murder, rape, oppression, tyranny, forced labor; eighty percent of crimes against abolitionists were left unaddressed — until John Brown decided to address them."

Brown's raids against anti-abolitionists went as follows: the anti-abolitionists were lured out of their homes by Brown, who was purportedly asking for directions, and then set upon by his men, who murdered and dismembered them on the spot.

The South has always had a "culture of violence" in which honor was redeemed through violence. And implicit in that violence was a kind of romanticism seen in feuds and duels. John Brown, on the other hand, in the words of Adam Gopnick, in the April 25, 2005 issue of The New Yorker said, "He had a particularly bad case of the old New England identification of the Puritans with the Jews, as the armed and chosen people.....But he was also a resolute roundhead, an admirer of Oliver Cromwell.....But as the essayist John Jay Chapman observed in 1913, "Between 1830 and 1835, the element of passion was rising past the danger point, and running into something like insanity in the Southern mind."

The abolitionist attacks helped to form in the minds of Southerners a frightening aura about John Brown. Yet he was seen simultaneously as a visionary, a fearless man with integrity and moral courage. The final failed and bloody anti-slavery raid on Harper's Ferry, Virginia, in 1859, around which the book is centered, simply helped solidify a fear that Southerners had had for some time and which extends to the present day and can be seen in Trent Lott's response to the creation of a John Brown Day as "over my dead body."

Most of John Brown's critics simply labeled him as crazy. But John Wilkes Booth, the actor responsible for assassinating President Lincoln, thought of John Brown as "the greatest man of the Century." He may have detested his politics, but he envied Brown's ability to change history. Thoreau, one of the leading Transcendentalists, compared John Brown to Jesus Christ. The greatest writers of the period, Melville, Whitman, and Whittier, featured him in their poetry. Although the Transcendentalists were often accused of not being grounded in reality,

Change can be a tricky thing. But mom took to life at The Bristal with ease. She gets more done with each new day, and all with genuinely caring friends — residents and staff, alike. My greatest comfort comes in knowing mom isn't living alone. From the shopping trips, to the card games, to the fitness room, salon, cinema and more — she's again the social butterfly I remember so well growing up. Best of all: She's eating nutritious gourmet meals, the experienced staff adores her and her eyes are smiling once again. This is my mom. Active again. Life is better at The Bristal.

knows him and he is greeted with waves and hearty slaps on the back. We are introduced and I ask him what it is about the Cigar Bar that keeps everybody coming back?

"You have every kind of race, sex, religion, sexual orientation here and they all get along. If they don't, I ask them to leave. Anything can happen and often does. I make sure everybody behaves."

As the energy of the place rises, I find that people are incredibly accessible; they are having fun and wanting to talk. I turn towards the man on my right. His name is Captain Elen. He works on one of the boats docked in Sag Harbor and says he's been coming to the Hamptons for nine years now. When I tell him that I'm writing about the Cigar Bar for Dan's Papers, he says that he enjoys reading the paper every week and hopes that the story won't close the place down. I explain that I'm here to learn and am interested in everyone's experience.

"Even if it isn't positive?" he inquires. I nod yes. Whereupon, he launches into a story about how last summer a local woman who had had too much to drink damaged his car. He claims that when he reported it to the police, he was threatened with arrest. When I asked on what grounds, he said that the officer's response was,

"She's a known quantity. You are not."

He went on to say,

"Unfortunately, it would seem I could not trust the Sag Harbor Police to protect me against a local person. And you can print that."

He did say that he felt bad about having to say that, but he insisted it was the truth.

Meanwhile, a beautiful French woman with long brown hair, wearing a halter top and belly-button-exposing jeans, is gyrating between a Latin fellow and an Asian man. They are all moving together like a giant wave, and laughing, enjoying the movement and the music.

Adam, who had been keeping an eye on me, comes round to tell me not to pay Captain Elen much mind. "The only people the Sag Harbor police give a hard time to are the ones who drink too much," he says, "besides, there are many former members of the Sag Harbor Police who are regulars at the Cigar Bar, and on this night there are even some former members of the DA's office in New York, and some recent Bloomberg appointees in the crowd."

"You see what I mean by a mixed crowd?" he inquires.

I have to admit that when I set out for the Cigar Bar I expected to find a dinosaur, but instead I found a youthful, enthusiastic, open-minded, friendly, and hardworking crowd who at the end of a long day, "Just wanna have fun."

The drinks range from $8 for a Shirley Tempress to $12 for an X-Rated or Espresso Martini. And bartenders don't come much more animated and eager to please than Perry.

I have allergies to just about everything and expected to feel overwhelmed by the amount of Rumor has it that I've been doing it all over the east end for years.

Well, it's true and I'm proud of it.

Kazdin Pools always did much more than just build award winning pools and spas.

I really get upset, when I hear, "George, I knew you built Mrs. So and so's gunite pool. I didn't know you also did vinyl."

We do. We always did.

We build any shape gunite or vinyl pools and any spa you can think of.

We maintain them and when they start to wear, we renovate them.

Customers are always coming to our retail location, chatting, buying chemicals and pool toys. Having their pool water tested free.

I guess some people just won't understand that we can also put the entire package together.

Pools. Spas. Lighting. Patios and Decks. Landscaping. Repairs and Maintenance.

We do it all and we're going to keep doing it.

Now you know, and I feel better."

"FAMOUS OFFSPRING"

Second Generation Hollywood sure has its perks. This past Saturday evening, the UA theater in East Hampton set the stage for an 18 and under advance screening of Columbia Pictures' up-coming movie, Stealth. The action thriller hit's a theater near you, July 29th. The film was directed by Rob Cohen and stars Jamie Foxx, Jessica Biel and Josh Lucas. The screening was sponsored by Hampton Style Magazine. Managing Editor Josh May came out to represent the magazine with Teen Editor Mattie Siegal whose aunt, PR queen, Peggy Siegal, successfully rounded up the offspring from some filthy rich and famous names in the music and entertainment industry including Nick Isham, Lauren and Robby Cochran, Ali Foreman, Daisy Johnson, Rita Hayworth's grandson Andrew Embiricos, Stella Keitel, J.T. Della Femina, Samantha Perelman, Genevieve Price, Alexander Taubman, Lucas Loeffler, Liam McMullan and Maximilian Moehlmann. The guest list reads like a category on Jeopardy. Alex, I'll take famous offspring for a thousand. If you are looking for an extensive movie review you won't find it here. I thought the scene surrounding the actual movie was way more entertaining. The majority of designer clad boys and girls were so disinterested in the movie that it served as background noise, while they munched on free popcorn, joked with their friends and yakked on their cell phones, simultaneously. Now, you may think most of these privileged teens are riding on the coat tails of their well-known last names, but Kathleen Turner and husband Jay Weiss' daughter Rachel aspires to be a lot more than just a famous name. At the tender age of 17, Rachel has the intelligence, confidence and poise of a woman far beyond her years. I called her an "old soul" and she laughed and said, "I've heard that before." When I asked her who she came with to the screening, she just shrugged her shoulders and nonchalantly replied, "No one, my friend dropped out at the last minute." I was floored. I have never been to a movie by myself, but it didn't seem to faze Rachel. Maybe it's her summer job, working long hours at the local bookstore, or her love of music which she hopes one day will evolve into a career as a Jazz musician, that helps give her such a strong sense of self. "I don't have a band right now. I go to National Guitar summer workshop and I play with a bunch of people." Coincidentally, during the interview Rachel and I realized we share the same birthday, October 14th and are both enormous fans of the late Jeff Buckley. "I love Jeff. Recently, I covered Hallelujah. I think his voice could cure cancer." In Rachel's case, the apple doesn't fall too far from the tree. Her dad is a musician. "I played with my dad's band, The Suits, last year at the Dock House." Rachel admits she has similar personality traits to her mother, "I think she passed on her determination. She's known what she wanted to do since she was fifteen years old, and I started playing guitar at fifteen." According to Rachel, having a

The Bay Street Theater is having its annual Summer Gala on July 23rd at (where else?) the Siena Spirituality Center in Water Mill (and aren't charities going to have a problem if that property is purchased as a private residence). This year's event has a Latin theme and features a performance by the Broadway Cast of Forever Tango.

And now for an event not being held at Villa Maria..... Designer Margaret Russell, David Rockwell, Robert Rufino and others are participating in an Elle Décor Dining by Design event at East Hampton Studios on July 23rd. The event showcases inventive and innovative tabletop design and will benefit the Design Industries Foundation Fighting AIDS. Perhaps we could hook them up with the "Dinner in the Dunes" people.

Isn't house arrest supposed to be some sort of punishment? What about estate arrest? Although she owns a home in East Hampton, Martha Stewart is currently being held prisoner at her 150-acre Bedford estate. Stewart claims that her confines are torturous, but in the past week she was seen taking a horse drawn jaunt around her property. She throws lavish dinner parties. The only catch? It is unlawful for ex-cons to be included at supper.

"Eddie Mueller and the Rock"

By Dan Rattiner

In every small town there is a man who does the heavy excavation work. He owns bulldozers, trucks, small steam shovels, and he and his crew are the people that dig foundations, clear land and move fill.

Eddie Mueller is this man in Montauk. He is about five ten, broad shouldered, ruggedly handsome and with a manner approaching that of John Wayne. After all, he's the man with all the big guns in town.

Anyway, Mueller was at a party about a month ago, hoisting a few, when he got in conversation with some other local men in town.

"Hey, Eddie, you know, I'd like you to do me a favor," said Harry Clemenz, Jr., who runs a fishing boat at Montauk Harbor. "You know how you always come up with these great big boulders when you dig a foundation? Well, I was thinking that it would look really nice to have one out on my front lawn with my name on it. A great big boulder, maybe six feet high. I'd paint Clemenz on it. Can you do it?"

Before Mueller could reply, Ray Hegner, a local realtor, put his two cents in.

"I'd like one, too," he said, "Make that two orders for great, big boulders."

The next day, Harry Clemenz came home from work to find a seven foot boulder blocking his driveway. He couldn't put his car in the garage. Ray Hegner came home to find an even bigger boulder blocking his front door. He got in the house by going around the back.

"Well, these things happen," Mueller said when he was told about it over the phone. Could he move the boulders just as soon as he could? After all, they did need to get in and out.

"Sometime soon I expect well have a truck heading up that way," Eddie allowed. "I'll see what I can do."

A few weeks later, a picture appeared in the local weekly paper, showing a huge eight foot boulder sitting in the parking lot at the Blue Marlin Restaurant out near the railroad station. No one doubted it was one of Eddie Mueller's boulders, and rumor had it that Eddie had had a run in with Frank, the owner of the place. The rock stayed there for a few days, and then one morning it was gone. It had been moved during the night about two hundred yard, and now was completely blocking the Long Island Railroad garage where they keep the road n' rail buses during the night. The buses couldn't get in and out.

Later that day, Eddie Mueller was observed at the bar at Bill's Inn. He was in a thoughtful mood.

"I'm going into the Rent-A-Rock business," he said. "Eddie Mueller's Rent-A-Rock. You need a big boulder for a parade, to haul down the center of the street behind a marching band, give me a call. You have a wedding, a special occasion, where you need a rock measuring seven, eight feet high? Give me a call. There's big money in the Rent-A-Rock business." • smoke in the room, but surprisingly I was not. I suppose since I'm on a roll, I also must confess that on the rare occasion I have been known to enjoy a little imported cigarillo while downing a super-dry martini. If I recall correctly, the playwright Lanford Wilson is also a martini aficionado, and although not present this evening, he has been seen on several other occasions and is reputed to be a late night regular.

If a conclusion must be drawn, I'd say that I'd return to the Cigar Bar in a heartbeat. The people are very nice and very friendly, and the music is definitely great. Standing here watching the crowd I found myself thinking about the sorts of places Hemingway used to write about during his days living on The Cap D'Antibes, where there were little local bars where he could just hang out and talk after a day of writing and beach, with his latest fling. To someone who grew up in the great melting pot of New York City, and has lived in various places in Europe and the Middle East, I found the Cigar Bar a refreshing change from the usual pretensions of the majority of local watering holes. Besides, now that Bobby Van's is no longer the creative hub it was back in the Sixties when Truman Capote and James Jones drank there, it might very well be that The Cigar Bar has come along as the new millennium's answer to the literary and artistic hang out. I definitely wouldn't rule it out.

they were unquestionably among Brown's closest allies.

Brown's aura even penetrated the music of the period. The song, "John Brown's Body....." was sung by the Northern Troops as they fought, and the composer of the Battle Hymn of the Republic, having heard "John Brown's Body," claims to have then run home to compose her own.

Mr. Reynolds insists that President Lincoln never intended a war to end slavery.

"He wanted a war to restore the Union. He believed that slavery would die on its own, taking one hundred years to do so. He had no intention of launching a massive 'John Brown attack' on the South." Of course, Mr. Reynolds reminds us, history would prove otherwise.

"There can be no question that John Brown's actions sparked the Civil War," said Mr. Reynolds. When asked by an audience member how long the research for the book had taken him, he responded, "Four-and-a-half-years." He went on to elaborate, "The inspiration came from an essay by Thoreau on John Brown. I was intrigued by the cultural fire that it had created."

John Brown was said to have delivered one of the greatest yet little known speeches in American history to the Virginia Court during his trial. Mr. Reynolds deems it might very well be "the greatest" speech in American history, and he chose to close the afternoon by quoting Thoreau's opinion regarding its eloquence,

"John Brown did not make a difference with his rifles. He made a difference with his words."

But What If Sunscreen Causes Cancer?

I read recently that the American Cancer Society recommends you use sunscreen if you are going to be exposed to the sun for more than four minutes. So, it's walk around with an umbrella like Michael Jackson, or stay in your house and live like a mole. You wanna see the sun? Turn on the nature channel.

Sunscreen is in everything; chapstick, make-up, anti-bug spray, body lotion and, oh yeah, in bottles of sunscreen. Sunscreen is saturating our society and having a negative impact on our culture that no one is talking about.

Stone Age man did not have sunscreen, nor Iron Age people, nor Bronze Age, nor Classical, nor Roman, nor the Dark Ages people (heck, they got a break since the Dark Ages actually were dark), nor the Medieval people, nor the Renaissance folks, nor Industrial Age people, nor the Tupperware Age people, and they all lived. But all of a sudden, in the Microchip Age, we're all gonna die if we go outside without sunscreen...The makers of sunscreen and 'Tan in a bottle' stuff are making a fortune!

Sunburns have a place and purpose in society. You went to the beach, you got a sunburn, you went to a barbecue, you got a sunburn, you went boating, you got a bad sunburn.

When you went to work on Monday with a sunburn, it showed everyone that you actually did something that weekend. It shocked your boss to realize you had a life outside of work. It made an old office love wonder who you were with when you got the burn. You got lotsa extra attention.

"Man, you are fried...."

"Yea, but I had a great time. We went down to Louis' Beach...."

Sunburn has the side effect of severe exhaustion. Your pajamas against your skin never felt as soft and wonderful as when you came home toasted from the beach, took a cool shower, lathered on the Noxema and then got in your jammies. You slid into bed and were asleep before your head hit the pillow. Try that with SPF 50.

If you had an enemy at the office, there was nothing better than knowing they had a sunburn. Not only could you enjoy each little "ouch" and whimper as they sat down and tried to move around without pain, you could increase their pain with a little careful planning. It might take you a while to think of something you could congratulate them for, but you'd come up with it eventually. Then, as you're on your way to get coffee, you come up behind them in their chair and pause to give them a good natured slap on the back, right at the epicenter of their burn, and say, "So, Jerry, heard you got a new electric stapler. Cool. Wish I had one." And as they look up at you with eyes of agony that ask, "Are you are the anti-Christ?" you walk your victory lap to the coffee pot.

Sweet....

On Shelter Island, as with many boating communities, sunburn analysis is part of our forensic technique to determine if a relative is lying about having gotten a boat just to keep it to themselves.

"So when were you going to tell us you got a

PARRISH ART MUSEUM GALA

One of the Hamptons' most visible events each year is the Parrish Art Museum Midsummer Party, at the museum in Southampton. In classic Hamptons' style, the guests came into the main entrance, many of the women in floral dresses and the guys in summer uniform of dark blazer and beige or white pants, stopping to pose for the numerous photographers at the museum to cover the event. The crowd milled in the front inside rooms talking, some air kissing, it looked like a movie scene. Then inside the tent in the arboretum for dinner, dancing letting loose a little. Then the After Ten party began with some of the younger

CMEE GALA

Many people don't know what CMEE is but that is sure to change. It is pronounced "See Me" and is the Children's Museum of the East End. In mid-October it will be the dream come true opening of the 11,000+ square foot children's museum that will delighting kids old and young for many years to come. CMEE is promising that the museum will be a beacon for imaginative hands-on learning for kids, and as a parent, I cannot wait to take my daughter there. We went to a room-without-walls performance a while back and it was great fun. The Gala was held at the beautifully set Channing Daughters Winery in Bridgehampton. There were examples of the interactive learning that will be part of CMEE as well as lots of supporters there to celebrate a journey about to be completed. Grammy nominated Yerba Buena entertained the guests.

13TH ANNUAL HAMPTONS TEA DANCE

The Empire State Pride Agenda Foundation hosted the 13th Annual Hampton's Tea Dance in Watermill on over 100 acres of pasture off Millstone Road. The tea dance is one of the best lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) rights event of the summer season. As usual an impressive cross-section of leaders from the worlds of business, finance, law, philanthropy, politics, fashion, art and design turned out on this magnificent day to support gay rights. DJ Lady Bunny kept the crowd of over 1,000 dancing to benefit The Empire State Pride Agenda Foundaton, New York's statewide gay civil rights organization.

The New Parrish is Born

(2 miles from Southampton Village)

Our Past

In 1898, Samuel Parrish built a museum in Southampton Village to display his eclectic collection of Greek and Roman sculpture and Italian Renaissance paintings. His vision and determination established a standard of excellence for the Parrish and other village institutions. The museum on Job's Lane is his legacy to us all.

Our Present

The Museum has seen many changes since Samuel Parrish's time. It has more than tripled in size, its audience has grown, and its collection of 19th- through 21st- century American art has developed into one of the finest of its kind in the country. It has been clear for some time that our original building, owned by the Southampton Village Trustees, can no longer meet the needs of the Museum and its public. Yet expansion on Job's Lane, no matter how thoughtfully planned for and designed, would compromise the scale and integrity of the Village center.

Our Future

A new facility, located about 2 miles from Southampton Village, on 14 acres formerly owned by Whitmore's Nursery in Water Mill, will solidify the Museum's role as a vital cultural center and resource for our local community, as well as for art-lovers from around the world.

For the first time, the new building will enable us to tell the unique story of the art and artists of Long Island's East End through the display of our renowned and growing collection. In addition, we will be able to present a larger, more dynamic schedule of special exhibitions that illuminate American art and culture.

Our celebrated partnerships with area schools and our engaging public programs for seniors, adults, and children will flourish in modern and fully equipped studios, classrooms, and a theater, as well as in special teacher-training facilities. The new Museum will also feature improved visitor amenities, such as an expanded gift- and bookshop, a café, a landscaped garden and park, and ample parking.

Our Hope

As we take this groundbreaking step, we appreciate the patience and concern that has been shown us during this challenging and carefully thought-out process. We remain deeply committed to fulfilling the promise of what one man started over a century ago and what is today the mission and resolve of the Museum's Board of Trustees, Director, and staff.

As we move forward with plans for our new facility, we hope to begin a new dialogue with Southampton Village Trustees about the future of the Job's Lane building and grounds in order to ensure that the legacy of Samuel Parrish is honored.

We welcome your interest, your comments, and your support as we move forward.

Annual Blues Festival Rocks Riverhead

Music, Dancing, Blues, Fun, Lawn Chairs, And A Wonderful Scene

By Debbie Tuma

Many people were singing the blues last weekend when several thousand congregated on lawn chairs and blankets along the Peconic Riverfront for Riverhead's seventh annual Blues Festival. As I walked along the river through the parking lot, I noticed it was transformed into a sort of "Woodstock Blues Concert," with families, couples, and people of all ages dancing and rocking to this soulful early Saturday evening. They are no strangers to Riverhead, having performed in the past year at the Vail Leavitt Music Hall, where I purchased one of their CDs.

On our way to the West Stage, another outdoor venue, we walked around the huge grounds to taste some local corn, burgers, beer, and barbecued items from a number of vendors on premises. There were popular black "Riverhead Blues Festival" T-shirts and other items for sale, and music. I wondered how in all the years I've lived in the Hamptons, I'd never made it over to Riverhead to this event until now, and I was excited about experiencing my first blues festival. How could you beat three days of great blues music for free?

Over this three-day event, from Friday, July 8 through Sunday, July 10, dozens of blues bands played non-stop throughout each day and night, with simultaneous venues on both inside and outside in Riverhead Town. The hardest part about this festival was finding convenient parking, with Main Street closed off on Saturday. With Friday night's rain, the bands performed inside two popular places – Club 91 and the Vail Leavitt Music Hall. Friday night featured such well-known blues groups and acts as Lil Cliff & the Cliffhangers, NYC Blues Devils, Boom Boom Johnson, Bobby Nathan, Joe Vicino and The Smoke Daddy's, Terraplane Blues, Wallace Heartley Project, and my personal favorite name, The Defibrillators.

I arrived at the festival last Saturday with a group of friends, and we staked out our spot in the shade, under some trees, near the "Luke Alvino Stage." One friend had driven here from Bayshore, and the other, a female teacher, from Center Moriches, came on her motorcycle.

This year's Blues Festival, despite the excitement and fun, was tinged with sadness, over the unexpected death of a popular blues singer named Luke Alvino, who died on June 18 at the age of 44. He was the lead singer in the "Dare Ya Blues Band," and also a harmonica player. With so many stages in the weekend program, the festival committee had decided to dedicate the South Stage in his memory. Alvino has played in five of the previous Riverhead Blues Festivals, with "Dare Ya" and "Mainline Gospel." He and his band also donated their time last April for the Deep Sea Blues Bash at the Atlantis Aquarium, which was a benefit for the Blues Festival. He leaves behind his wife Lisa, daughters Joy and Alexa, and many family, friends and bandmates. Another blues concert will be held in his memory this Sunday, July 17, at the Vail Leavitt Music Hall in Riverhead.

Beginning at noon on Saturday, many great blues bands took the Luke Alvino Stage, including one of my favorites, T-Bone and the Hatchet Men Featuring Frannie Mae. Wearing a white dress and flowers in her hair, Frannie belted out blues songs with the power of Janis Joplin, and even sounded a bit like the late singer. Similar to her in nature, was another resonant voice, of the lead female singer in the Alexis P. Suter Band. They dedicated one of their songs to Alvino. Following them were many wonderful blues groups, including Hooch and the Bluesicians, Hitman Blues Band, Tinsley Ellis, and Maxine Brown.

I spoke with one woman, named Giuditta, of Calverton, who had brought her kids to the show and was having a great time. "This is my fourth year there were even psychic readers doing mini-sessions. We walked over the West Stage and sat on the grass to catch the one-hour act of another favorite group, The Lone Sharks, who are famous on the East End of the island, where they used to perform at the former Wild Rose cafe in Bridgehampton, and are now seen everywhere.

Gene Casey, the tall lead singer of the Lone Sharks, who was wearing his signature black outfit including black hat, sang some of his original tunes, and explained that the band has been together about 15 years.

We popped into the Vail Leavitt Music Hall, which dates back to 1881 and which has recently been restored and brought back to life in the heart of Riverhead's downtown business district. Here, in this hall which seats about 275 people, we caught some acts by Jim Moran and Pam Betti, who also played at the blues benefit at Atlantis Marine World Aquarium in April. We saw Tommy Keys, who sometimes plays at the East Ender Coffee Shop, and we saw Lil Toby Walker, who was his usual best on stage.

Saturday night, the blues music rocked Riverhead into the dark skies, until a surprise fireworks show lit up the skies to the musical background. Several groups, including The Mojo's, Lewd Budda, Phil Varca and the Slamjammers, and ZydeCoal, played into the late hours.

Sunday brought more sun, heat, crowds and fantastic blues music. Some of the groups who performed were the Riverhead Building Supply Gospel Choir, Sweet Georgia Brown, Sam Taylor, Who Are Those Guys, The Shades, Prof. Louie and the Cromatix, The Walter Lewis Blues Band and Ratso.

Throughout the weekend, Riverhead came alive with the sounds of blues and jazz, and the restaurants and stores were filled with crowds. The Riverhead Business Improvement District did a great job of organizing this event, which required advance planning since last December. Some of the many sponsors of this year's Blues Festival included Home Depot, WRCN-Radio Station, Suffolk County National Bank, Apple Honda, Bank of America, The Improper, Ninow's Music, FSBOMagazine, Amerigas, Paraco Gas, Guitar Center Commack, LIPA, Riverhead Building Supply, The Highlands at Aquebogue, and Grand AM RV.

coming here with my friends and family, and I think this event helps to unite the whole community," she said.

Andrew Worgo, of Riverhead, said he thinks this festival adds much to Riverhead's already growing cultural expansion. "In recent years, this town has really made an effort to rejuvenate its downtown area with lots of events and attractions for the whole family," he said.

Kevin O'Rourke of Riverhead, who was dancing on his blanket, said, "This concert is awesome, and the best part is, it's free!"

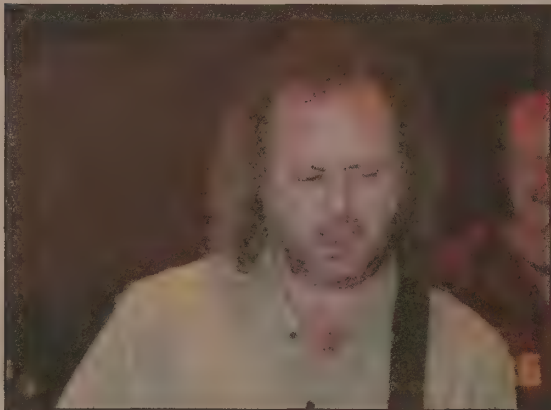

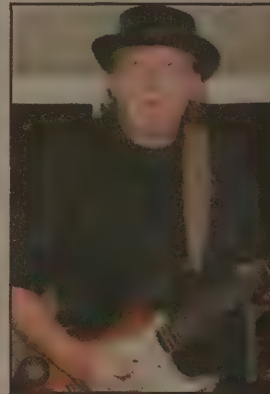

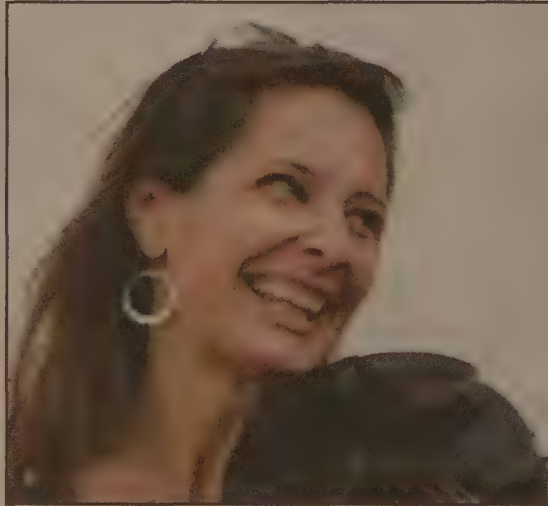

Another of my favorite groups, Frank Latorre and The King Bees, of Long Island, took the Alvino stage

*Dan's North Fork Goes To...RIVERHEAD BLUES FESTIVAL

It was a dark and stormy night, but the rain could not put a damper on the opening night of The Seventh Annual Riverhead Blues Festival. Club 91 and The Vail-Leavitt Music Hall hosted all the performers. The performers and the crowd had a most excellent time! The sun and the crowd came out on Saturday and Sunday to listen and party with the bands. Which band to see? Certainly it was a tough choice to make as music was performed all day long on three stages.

It was clear to all that were there that each band enjoyed the music they were performing. The performers were having fun and so was the crowd. Children and adults alike were dancing and singing, some were hanging out and enjoying the music. Others were having a picnic, playing with their children and listening to the music. It didn't matter how they were listening to the music, what mattered most was that everyone had a big smile on their face!

Dan's North Fork

This restaurant is very easy to find by following the signs from the traffic circle on Rte 58 in Riverhead. It also is a great destination. The restaurant is part of the luxurious clubhouse complex but is a luxury restaurant in its own right. I reviewed the restaurant a couple of years ago just a month after it opened, so there was a sense of anticipation about finding out how it had developed in the interim.

Guy Peuch is still, thankfully, the Executive Chef and from the tasting menu he had set out, it was clear that this would be a fun evening. We started with Gravlox, cured and marinated salmon that is a specialty of Scandinavia. This was one of the best ever, especially with Guy's personal touch of using chukka, a seaweed salad to add a little Oriental flavor. Another delightful appetizer was some delicious local asparagus in a pastry case with the most incredible morel sauce. The intense earthy fragrance of the mushrooms brought this dish to the level of greatness. We always share our dishes, but this was one of the few occasions when I almost refused to allow any of it to leave me but chivalry eventually prevailed! If it is on the menu go for it, for sadly local asparagus will soon be a dream. This dish made us realize again just what a master saucier Guy Peuch is. Those of us who like to dabble at cooking can only sit back in awe and enjoy the results of a master craftsman!

This awe continued to grow as we moved onto Montauk black sea bass in a bouillabaisse broth served over perfect mashed potatoes. The broth had an incredible fragrant and delicate taste, and the accompanying scallops, shrimp and clams made this whole dish a paean to the wonderful seafood we are privileged to enjoy from our local waters. The restaurant's crab cakes have acquired a great reputation and everything said about them is true. They were full of crab, perfectly cooked and the red pepper coulis had just the right amount of bite.

For the meat courses, we sampled chicken breast that tasted great. It was cooked with white wine and chanterelles served over immaculately prepared fettuccini. Then came thin slices of duck breast cooked rare with a pepper sauce and a selection of wonderful vegetables.

Somehow we managed to leave a little space to taste a chocolate tart that must be the epitome of chocoholic indulgence, intense but never cloying, with a long taste like a good wine. Finally, a simple poached pear with a delectable caramel sauce and superb vanilla ice cream brought a truly memorable meal to a close as we sipped excellent espresso coffee.

Patti Kaszmarczyk, the enthusiastic General Manager, told us about the Ladies Nights she organizes one Monday a month, with 2 for 1 drinks and complimentary appetizers and which are attracting a growing following. They also are looking to expand the catering side of their operation for rehearsal dinners, birthdays and so on and currently can cater for up to around 100 guests. The restaurant is open for lunch and dinner. They offer a three course Sunday brunch for $21.95; a three course Prix Fixe dinner on Sunday to Thursday for $29.50 and an a la carte menu, where appetizers range from $10 to $15; and main courses from $21 to $30. The wine list is interesting with both local and international selections and is very sensibly priced from around $20 a bottle or $7 to $9 a glass.

On my first visit I commented that this was an excellent restaurant with Guy Peuch undoubtedly one of the best chefs out here. All I would add to this is to say that the restaurant has matured. The setting is even more beautiful, the service is both friendly and professional and Guy is a great chef who takes a real pride in the food he prepares. This restaurant really is one of our local semi-hidden treasures so, if you really love exceptionally good food, go to Riverhead, follow the signs to Stonewalls, then sit back and enjoy, just as we did.

Taste the North Fork in Westhampton Beach

Thanks to one Long Island wine veteran and one of the region's rising stars (not to mention a personal favorite), visitors to the South Fork can get a taste of the North Fork without taking the ferry or driving around Peconic Bay.

Ray Blum, founder of Peconic Bay Vineyards in 1979 (now Peconic Bay Winery under new ownership) and owner of Ackerly Pond Vineyards, and Jim

Waters of Waters

Crest Winery have teamed up to open the Hamptons Wine Boutique, located at 118 Main Street in Westhampton Beach.

And, to help promote the local wine industry, and differentiate themselves as more than just another wine shop, Blum and Waters are only selling Long Island wine – from eight of the region's best producers. Currently wines are available from Castello di Borghese, Waters Crest Winery, Ackerly Pond Vineyards, Sherwood House Vineyards, Cutchogue Cellars and Schneider Vineyards from the North Fork, Red Fern Cellars (the Island's sole Kosher winery) in Queens and Wolffer Estate in Sagaponack

They are also selling locally made furniture, gifts and gourmet foods as well as prints and paintings by artist Doug Reina.

I haven't had a chance to visit the store yet, but I did recently taste a couple of Blum's wines, and while they aren't going to unseat the Island's best, they are good and food-friendly.

The Ackerly Pond Vineyards 2003 Chardonnay ($16) is a medium-to-light yellow and crystal clear in the glass. After a quick swirl, the nose offers fruity pear and tropical aromas with hints of vanilla custard. Flavors range from pear to pineapple and vanilla cream. This is a fresh, refreshing wine with good acidity for balance. A great food wine, I'd serve it with salmon or lobster dishes or as an aperitif. It's not a great value at 16 bucks, but not preposterously over-priced either.

A Silver Medal winner at the 2005 Finger Lakes International Wine Competition, the Ackerly Pond Vineyards Cabernet Franc ($19) is a relatively low tannin wine that offers a light nose of black fruit, cedar and a little smoke. Medium-bodied and somewhat rustic, its palate is filled with spicy plum and blackberry fruit flavors and smoky oak. I found the brief finish disappointing and a little tart-sour. I'd probably not drink it without food, so sip alongside grilled meat dishes.

Ackerly Pond Vineyards also makes a rosé made with Pinot Noir grapes and the mandatory Long Island Merlot, and all of Blum's wines are bottled using synthetic corks.

If you find yourself in Westhampton this summer, check out the Hamptons Wine Boutique. It's the best way to get a taste of Waters Crest Winery's Riesling and Gewürztraminer, Sherwood House Vineyards Chardonnay and the only kosher wines made with Long Island Grapes – without spending a day driving.

Opera Of The Hamptons

The Show Carmen Will Play At The Vail Leavitt In Riverhead

Spain will come to Riverhead with a vengeance on Saturday July 16th at the Vail Leavitt Theater in Riverhead as Opera of the Hamptons stages Bizet's wonderful Carmen. This is without doubt one of those operas where everyone knows the tune of at least one of the songs, whether it is the wild gypsy girl Carmen's opening scene and her haunting 'Habanera' too the much copied and often karaoked 'Song of the Toreador.'

Even though it was written back in 1875, the compelling story and tempestuous music still is fresh and new however many times you may have heard it.

The story revolves around Carmen, a wild gypsy girl, and the way she sets out to entrap and seduce the hapless Don Jose (a sergeant in the army) and take him away from his simple peasant girl fiancé Michaela. In the end she succeeds and even gets him to desert and join a band of smugglers. Love never runs smoothly, particularly in the world of opera, even one such as this originally labeled as 'opera-comique!' The proverbial fly in the ointment is the conceited toreador, Escamillo, who sets his sights on Carmen, he is rebuffed at first by her but eventually Carmen decides a toreador ranks higher than a simple soldier, so bye-bye Don Jose. Infatuation does not easily die so Don Jose bides his time and finally, while Escamillo is busy in the bull ring dispatching another bull, Don Jose plays matador with Carmen and she does not win either. Maybe because only Carmen (and the bull) dies, that accounts for the opera's 'comique' status!

For this performance, Artistic Director, Barbara Giancola has assembled yet another star-studded international cast. Tammy Hensrud debuts with the company as Carmen. She has performed with the Vienna State Opera, Stuttgart Opera, Metropolitan Opera and the Salzburg Festival and has been acclaimed for her beautiful voice, which is capable of many colors and nuances. She is also "a singer who is a natural actress." Marc Deaton, another newcomer to Opera of the Hamptons, will sing the role of Don Jose. Deaton starred in the Bulgarian Festival Orchestra's recent recording of Tristan and Isolde and he was the subject of a PBS program entitled, "On Being Tristan - A Tenor's Journey." He also has had major roles with productions of the L.A. Philharmonic, Bangkok Opera and he has performed at the Lincoln Center. Regular attendees at Opera of the Hamptons performances were disappointed when Richard Hobson, another regular with the Met, had to drop out of the first performance this season at St. Mark's in Westhampton Beach due to a sudden major family emergency. Thankfully, Hobson is back and will bring his tremendous baritone voice and stage presence to the role of the toreador Escamillo.

Backed by the artistry of Music Director, Atarah Hazzan and the inspiration of Stage Director Deloss Brown, this beautifully restored landmark opera house, originally opened in the 1880s and one of only 14 such in the country, will be full of the compelling characterizations and unforgettable melodies that have made Carmen one of the universal favorites of the operatic stage. The show is almost guaranteed to send the audience home with the melodies resonating through their minds.

Tickets are priced at $45.00 before the day through calling 728-8804 or, if available, at $55.00 at the door.

The Washwick Agency Health Insurance Made Affordable

What happens when 2,000 self-employed business men and women, freelance artists, writers and other sole proprietors are brought together? They get group insurance rates that are far more affordable than they could ever get on their own, thanks to The Washwick Agency.

"Due to New York insurance laws, sole proprietors do not have the same access to affordably-priced medical and dental insurance as larger businesses," explained Karl Washwick, president of the Riverhead, Long Island-based agency. Many independent contractors, freelancers, and small businesses and their employees find insurance costs so exorbitant, that insurance expenses drain an excessive portion of their bottom line or, more frequently, they go without coverage all together.

With medical expenses soaring, people are taking high risks operating in business without proper insurance coverage. Many feel they have no choice.

"I am a small business so I understand the problems of small businesses," said Washwick, who founded the agency 25 years ago to meet the medical and dental insurance needs of an underserved, but significant population.

The Washwick Agency formed and acts as administrator of the Peconic Bay Business Association. By joining the association, the self-employed and their employees are eligible for group rate plans. Although based at the eastern tip of Long Island, the Peconic Bay Business Association provides its services to people working or residing in all of Long Island and all five boroughs of New York City.

By specializing in medical and dental insurance, Washwick feels his agency's efforts to get clients the best possible rates should stay undiluted." I don't do car insurance," Washwick laughed.

The Washwick Agency works closely with each client to best understand his or her insurance needs, and then helps choose the best of many available plans for that client. Each plan can offer a variety of baffling choices, such as HMOs, In-and-Out-of-Network plans and options for hospitalization and prescription co-pays, vision plans, and dependent child coverage. The Washwick Agency helps cut through the confusion. "I'll tell you the plans that are available, and the pros and cons of each," Washwick said.

The Washwick Agency also offers such "business solutions" as oversight of employee benefit plans and retirement savings plans.

The agency's mission is to provide clients with the best possible plan at the lowest possible cost. They promise to listen to your needs, sort through the maze of products and services available and help you choose what is most appropriate for you.

The Washwick Agency is located at 860 East Main Street in Riverhead, New York. For more information on their services call 369-0888 or visit their website at www.Washwick.com.

Dan's North Fork Critics' Choice

Bayview Inn & Restaurant— Culinary fireworks from a North Fork sparkler, in view of Peconic Bay. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell provide a warm welcome and the interior is comfortably elegant. But mostly they come from miles around for chef Tom Lopez' inspired creations. His restless imagination is big on subtle tastes and Asian themes. With new specials emerging constantly, keeping up with his menu requires frequent visits, but it's an invitation his fans gladly welcome. A quick sampler: lobster and brie quesadillas; duck dumplings with ponzu dipping sauce; sea scallops over squid ink fettuccine. Try the flan dessert. 10 Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrées, $21-$28. (Bradbrook 6/10/05).

The Clubhouse— At the gateway to the North Fork, this quiet gem features an extensive menu that won't dent your wallet. The restaurant's relaxed ambience trades on its location alongside the Peconic River at Indian Island C.C. and chef/owner Russ Moran's pleasant staff. The expansive menu offers many savory dishes, including a broiled seafood platter and a spectacularly satiating Mexican salad — an incredible value at $9.95. Delectable seafood starters include New England clam chowder, bacon-wrapped citrus shrimp and their justifiably famous raw or pan-fried oysters. Bailey's Irish cream cheese cake is a wonderful finale. Entrées $12.95- 18.95. Riverside Dr. and Rt. 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. (David Rattiner, 7/1/05).

Cooperage Inn— With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produces inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame-crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Off-premises catering a specialty. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Funcho's Fajita Grille— A delectable assortment of Tex-Mex favorites guaranteed to leave taste buds hopping and appetites satisfied. Taco, quesadilla and fajita platters pair up with chunky homemade guacamole. But to experience Janice and Alfonso Zavala's wonderful eatery's range of possibilities, the Funcha-Dilla is a must. Tightly packed with steak, chicken, guacamole, sour cream, beans, corn, onions, peppers and cheese, it costs just $7.99. Tacos have an international flair and the burritos are creative, flavorful and enormous. Low-carb tortillas are available for the dieter. Beers include Corona and Dos Equis XX. 1156 W. Main St. Riverhead, 369-7277 and 127 Main St., Westhampton Beach. (Stuart, 6/7/05).

La Plage— A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef/proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance, try the lightly-seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime/sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brûlée.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrées $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04).

Modern Snack Bar— Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. The Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crabcakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrées, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Pepi's— Highly popular Northern Italian with dazzling views of Peconic Bay from inside tables and those on its patio. Tantalizing appetizers include calamari sautéed in a pungent marinara sauce and an inspired combo of roasted red peppers and anchovies. Entrées like cod marechiare, with fish and shellfish in a rich tomato cream broth served with pasta ensure no one goes home hungry. Pepi's is at the forefront of the organic food movement and recently has incorporated international organic wines, vodka and beer to the dining experience. Tiramisu tops the dessert list. Good selection of local wines. Entrées, $16-$20. Old Main Rd., Southold, 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 5/27/05).

Red Door— A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brûlée and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrées — $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

The Shady Lady Inn— One of the North Fork's architectural curiosities reopens as an upscale steakhouse. The fare has changed, the top-line kitchen personnel hasn't. Chef Ross Esner knows his oysters and brings in exceptionally fresh kumumoto. Simplicity also wins the day with the "Wedge," an iceberg of iceberg lettuce topped with crisp bacon and bleu cheese. Virtually every cut of highest-quality steak can be enjoyed. Accompaniments are what you'd expect—and all expertly done. Extensive wine list tops out at an $1800 Caymus. Two dining rooms; jackets suggested in the more formal Scarlet dining room. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entées ($21 and up). (Bradbrook 7/8/05).

Soundview Inn— Picture windows overlook the Sound from every table. On the elevated outdoor deck, however, the tables actually over hang the Sound! Rachel Levin Murphy's restaurant in some of the best sunsets on the East Coast and also serves tasty fare in a relaxing environment. Plump and succulent steamers make a great starter as does chicken liver crostini for more adventurous tastes. Chef Kevin Rushkoski's leg of lamb in a rosemary reduction came up tender and flavorful, without a trace of gaminess and was accompanied by expertly-wilted spinach. Desserts' are collectively incredible. The somewhat abbreviated wine list is well-selected and agreeably priced. Entrées $19.50–$27.50. North Road, Greenport. 477-0666. Bradbrook (5/20/05).

Stonewall's— Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrées, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck a l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrées $15–$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

The Fifth Season— The latest entry in the Greenport haute cuisine sweepstakes rates among the very best. With a city-like Front Street entrance, solicitous service, crisply laid tables and art-lined walls, Erik and Jennifer Orlowski's restaurant glistens with a sophisticated ambience. Appetizers—especially the garlic and lemon-thyme crusted prawns over sweet corn and bean relish—augur well for the short list of impeccably-prepared entrées. Duck breast in a tart cherry demi-glace reflects the chef's admirably clean cooking style, with the sauce complementing, not masking, the bird's flavor. Chocoholics will clean up come dessert time. 45 Front St., Greenport. 477-8500. Entrées, $19–$29. (Bradbrook 6/24/05)

Touch of Venice— Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with Gorgonzola; and black Angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrées $16–$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02).

Tweed's— Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London. Entrées $19–26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

Trying Out To Be A Scarecrow

Dan's Writer Tries Out To Be A Scarecrow At Harbes Farm and Gets The Job

By Ian Squires

"So are you definitely interested?" asked Jamie Davis, entertainment coordinator at Harbes Family Farm.

"Well, I think so," I replied anxiously, "but you've got to interview those other people, right?"

"Yes, but you can do this, should I put you down?" Jamie was asking if I would commit to be one of the people to share the role of the scarecrow at the third annual Wizard of Oz summer corn maze at the Harbes Farm in Mattituck.

Just two minutes ago I was comically (sort of) playing the scarecrow: my shoulders hunched up, legs and arms dangling loosely as per Jamie's instructions, enunciating ".....if I only had a brain!" I scratched my head quizzically, then reached out as if to shake Jamie's hand and humorously (sort of) fell down while attempting a noticeably poor backwards somersault before popping up with a stupid grin, palms up and arms stretched out wide. "Let's follow Dorothy to the yellow brick road," I pleaded as two girls who looked to be about 6 years old watched this grown man without a costume as if they feared at any moment he was going to locate Dorothy and kick her in the shins.

Owners Ed and Monica Harbes established Harbes Family Farm in 1989. It operates year-round growing and selling fruits and vegetables. They cater to families with live entertainment on the weekends, such as the upcoming 2.5-acre Wizard of Oz-themed corn maze at its Mattituck location, to run July 22nd through the end of September.

Davis says corn mazes are the latest craze in "this new thing called 'agri-tainment,' and what they did was create a small maze just because it's a nice thing to do. A lot of people in the Midwest have been doing corn mazes for years."

Who are the Harbes targeting with their brand of agricultural entertainment? "Moms, dads, kids that want to ride around and pet the rabbits, and while they're here they want to have a little fun and go into the maze," Davis says. "We want them to have a good time, to go into this maze which has actually been designed by one of the Harbes family (adult) children, and to have this live action scarecrow as part of the program. They'll be able to meet this funny, goofy guy that'll make people laugh."

Why the Wizard of Oz? Owner Ed Harbes says, "The Wizard of Oz is a classic American theme" with Dorothy on a quest for answers to find her way home. When she finally meets the Wizard, he teaches her a lesson. "She actually had the capacity to get home all along, she just didn't realize it. I think that chord resonates with many people. We actually have the ability to do more than we realize. I think that has a perennial appeal to the American population."

In the timeless Wizard of Oz, the scarecrow imagines having a brain. "I would not be just a nothin'/My head all full of stuffin'," he sings (and I sang). Says Ed Harbes, "It's one of my favorite themes. They find the scarecrow on the outskirts of a cornfield and the scarecrow is a lovable guy and he's smarter than he realizes as well. Like a lot of us."

And there I was, singing at Harbes Farm on the outskirts of a cornfield that is waiting to be carved into a maze. "Oh you're off to see the Wizard/The wonderful Wizard of Oz," I crooned happily. The two girls had thankfully moved on but Jamie's friendly disposition never changed no matter how poorly I performed. Regardless of how many times I stressed the wrong words in a song or cursed at myself when I failed miserably to bounce right up out of a backwards roll with a huge grin, all the while ignoring the visitors who glanced appreciatively at their children and silently pitied my parents.

Jamie is confident that with a little practice I can do this well, otherwise he wouldn't have offered me the position. I really don't have time for another job. The maze will be open every day but they only have the scarecrow on the weekends, and I would probably only work one day a week for just a few hours. But with the amount of practice and preparation I'd need to make myself a good scarecrow, it'd be more work than I should take on. Being the scarecrow at this corn maze would not be worth the meager compensation and would be completely useless on my resume. In fact, I can think of only one reason to tell Jamie that I will take on the job: If I pass on the chance to play the Wizard of Oz scarecrow at a farm's corn maze, I will likely regret it for the rest of my life. Who wouldn't want to one day tell that story to their kids? Hmmm.....maybe I will do it.

Cooperative Play for a Happier Beach Day

Max is digging a hole to China. It's hard work, the sun is hot, but it's fun. If he digs deep enough, he'll hit water, or crabs. Suzy is admiring her beautiful castle. She's a princess in every way, and her kingdom shows it. There are scallop shell windows and a driftwood drawbridge. Mussels line the moat. The sky frames its sandy structure with a rich, cloudless blue. Max can't seem to make it to China. He's getting bored. He puts down his plastic shovel and surveys the beach. Suzy is lost in a medieval fantasy. Prince Charming and white horses and Disney sing along songs wrap her mind. She's happy. Max is bored. Max sees Suzy's kingdom. He sees Suzy. She's happy. He is bored. Happy. Bored. Sand castle. Little boy. Little girl. Disaster.

Back to reality. The kingdom is toppled. Suzy's older brother is laughing and jumping up and down on the sand and shells. She is crying. There is a mound of rubble. Now you get involved. You put down your book. The Da Vinci Code is out in paperback this summer. You just wanted to finish your chapter. The story is getting intense. Now it's time to play diplomat. Stay calm. You are not John Bolton. You are the caring parent. This is a vacation. Max is in trouble. Suzy is crying in your lap. Now Max is crying. You just want to read your book and relax. It's been a long week.

If this scenario sounds familiar, and for many parents it will, you might consider some alternative ways to keep your kids happy together during your summer at the beach. Cooperative play, working together, helps children learn to respect the ideas of others as well as developing their social skills and competence. All early childhood education maintains this as an underlying goal. Problem solving and joint efforts are important for emotional growth.

Building with sand doesn't have to end in meltdown, as was the case with Max and Suzy. Try creating a challenge for them to meet as a team. Maybe suggest that they construct a kingdom that they rule together. If it's for both or all of them, each child will take pride in their piece of the proverbial pie. Children use large muscles when digging and piling sand, adding physical development to the mix. Have them join in to erect the main structure while also adding satellite castles to fit each of their individual tastes. Now they each have something of their own, and a central focus for the group effort. Ask questions to keep them interested and spark their imaginations. What does that do? Who lives there? How does that work? What is your world called? Inquiries like this focus attention and bolsters connection to the project. The deeper their involvement, the less chance of chaos erupting.

There are lots of great beach toys out there that should provide hours of fun for your kids. When choosing what to buy/bring, try not to overdo it, but make sure there is enough to go around. For example, if you have two kids, bring three trucks. Strong variations can create a standout choice for each child. Continue to encourage imaginative cooperative play by suggesting a construction site or other activity. Kaplan Early Learning makes some interesting dinosaur bone molds that can be used to build a full skeleton in the sand. Children will work to piece the puzzle together in the shape of the favorite Jurassic creature. The solution is attained more easily as a group. Keep up the questions and encouragement. Sand molds of letters and numbers are also available for slightly older children. Ask them to spell their names. A wide variety of buckets, rakes, sifters, shovels and molds will add further interactivity and choice. When the day comes to a close, get the kids to work together at cleaning up their toys. This helps foster responsibility, and ends the day by reinforcing group efforts. Hopefully it will carry into the night and on through your children's formative years.

Obviously playtime will never be without its pitfalls – one wanting what the other has, one feeling ignored, a hit on the head from a plastic shovel – but by crafting an atmosphere of imagination, and making teamwork a necessity, problems will be minimized. Everybody wins. Lead by example and interact with your spouse. But don't be afraid to relax and do your own thing. If everything is done right, and you've navigated the situation toward positive cooperation, you might just finish that book.

—Oliver Peterson

The Bridgehampton Child Care Summer Program

The Bridgehampton Child Care Center in collaboration with Bridgehampton High School will be offering two very unique programs this summer. The High School will be offering an enrichment program from 9 AM - 12 PM for Bridgehampton students, and a second session from 1 PM - 4 PM. These same students will be taking part in The Center's summer recreational program which will include: Basketball, Softball, Arts & Crafts and many other activities. The students in the enrichment program will not be charged a fee as long as their parents are residents of Bridgehampton. Space is limited to 60 students. For non-residents there will be a fee for the half day sessions. The fee for non-residents is $75 dollars a week, in advance. The fee for the whole summer will be $375.

The Bridgehampton Child Care Center
Summer Program will run from July 11th through August 12th

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Boat money. It's a lot like vacation money or, for that matter, collector car money. It's cash one lavishes on a passion. As sane and frugal as one may be with everyday expenses, these big bucks, when laid out, border on fiscal insanity.

A boat has been called a hole in the water that one pours money into. Most people don't know it but most fiberglass boats over five years old get blisters on their bottoms. The older the boat, the more blisters. Twenty-year-old boats can have hundreds of blisters. The repair is to hone out the blister and fill it with new fiberglass epoxy. On a boat of say thirty feet, this repair can cost an owner anywhere from $3,000 to $8,000. Oh, and within two or three years the blisters come back. Most boat buffs put up with this expense, because to them it's not real money, it's boat money.

Rust to a car guy is the equivalent of boat blisters to a boating enthusiast. Over the years I've had rust repaired on many of my older cars. Like boat blisters, rust always seems to reappear years later. This is after being fixed by the best body men in the business.

Years ago, a friend of mine dragged me to a field in Quogue to show me a Packard convertible rusting in the grass where it sat for thirty years. What a sad sight, badly rusted, with no top and a disintegrated interior. I thought the car was beyond restoration. But Larry had that gleam in his eye. When he began panting and salivating, I kind of knew that he was going to purchase this mess of what was left of an automobile. Larry was loaded with "boat money." Several years later I saw the car fully restored, a joy to behold, but its restoration costs were more than a new Hatteras.

It is amazing what good restoration shops can do with old rusty cars. The only way to correctly repair rust is to excise it, and replace it with new metal. You have all heard the expression "Bondo Queen." This refers to a rusty car that has had the rust repaired, not by removing it, but by covering it with a form of fiberglass putty, sold by one manufacturer under the trade name of "Bondo." Once a bondo rust coverup is done, properly painted, it is virtually impossible to distinguish from a proper rust repair. The big problem with bondo is that the rusty metal under it will continue rusting, and within a year the repair will crack. There are a lot of "Bondo Queens" out there disguised as restored cars. Be wary. By the way, the best way to check for bondo on a car is to use a magnet. Held close to the bodywork, it's easy to tell if there's metal or bondo under that shiny paint. Just for the record, it's standard operating procedure to use a thin layer of bondo to smooth out body repairs, but rust bondo jobs can be an inch thick. Ferrari, when finishing hand pounded aluminum panels, uses Bondo to smooth out the look of the metal before painting.

Proper restorations do cost boat money, but, often, certain cars are worth as much as proper yachts. However, I've seen people put a $20,000 restoration on cars that are worth only $15,000 restored. But again, the premise of this article is that enthusiasts of expensive toys often spend crazy money on objects that are meaningful to them. With a "damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead" attitude, they buy and restore cars, boats, airplanes and houses with a fervor that would be worthy of a psychiatric thesis.

My best advice about buying a collector car is to buy one that has already been restored. It will save you a lot of grief in the long run. If you must have it restored, go to the best facility you can find. Price is secondary, look for quality. As I said in last week's article, "Price is soon forgotten, but quality lingers on." Oh, but for the right car, boat, airplane or house. Don't forget, you're going to sell it some day, so you want it to be as desirable as possible to begin with. The rich do know what to buy. This is why the most valuable collectibles are Ferraris, Hinckley sailboats, Beechcraft airplanes, waterfront homes and even old Rolex watches.

Like the wealthy, nearsighted Texan who had the windshield of his car ground to his prescription, all of you out there with boat money, keep afloat. It would be a boring world if CPAs ran our lives. Go out and buy those custom wheels. Put a supercharger on your new Ford Mustang. Spring for a new top on your Boxster. Get a bigger Hummer. Buy that '57 Corvette you've lusted after since the fifties. All you retired dentists out there, get some body art and buy a Harley. Buy that Ferrari Porsche or new Miata. Go to Fiji. Boat money is good for the soul, and the economy.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion RATTINER

Asking For A Date

One of the most difficult things that a guy has to deal with when he is in his twenties, or at any age for that matter, is to ask a girl out on a date. I don't know why this is so hard, but it is. Asking someone out on a date should be, in my opinion, something very normal and easy. All too often however, guys get way too nervous and they wimp out. I feel like this should change.

Last Friday I was delivering Dan's Papers on the North Fork with my friend Tom, who decided to help me out for the day. We were cruising along in this huge Dodge van with newspapers packed inside like sardines. We were quiet most of the way when we suddenly started to talk about what every guy talks about (straight guys anyway) whenever they have time to. Girls. I would like to let the reader know that this conversation is a super secret male bonding conversation and normally would be kept a secret. However, the events that unfolded on this day simply have to be told because it is an inspiration to the guys out there who are too shy to bite the bullet and ask a girl that they like out on date.

"So, what's your girl situation these days, Tom?"

"Not so great, man. I'm still single. I'm just trying to find the right one, you know? I sometimes see girls that I think are great, but I never know what to say to them."

"I know, man. It is hard these days for some reason. It's like you have to trick them into going out with you or something. Asking a girl out on a date is impossible, I wish that girls would ask us out," I said.

"That will never happen. It is up to us to ask the girls out, you just got to accept it."

"Yeah, you're right. I don't know what it is. It's a scary thing to ask someone out on a date."

"Oh, dude, it's impossible."

"You know, if you think about it, what is the worst that can happen? So they say no and you get a little embarrassed, big deal. I embarrass myself all the time. I mean, what is holding us back? It is just a simple question. I bet you a million bucks if you went up to a girl and introduced yourself, said 'you are pretty and I was wondering if you would like to go out sometime,' she would be totally impressed. Nobody does that anymore I don't think."

"Oh, my God, Dave, that is an awesome idea."

"It is?"

"That's it, man, I'm gonna try it." (laughing)

"What, like right now?"

"Watch me."

It was at this point that Tom and I had reached one of our delivery locations, the Orient Point Ferry, and we began to unload some newspapers. In a very mechanical fashion, Tom and I got out of the van, grabbed a couple of bundles of Dan's, and marched inside. Inside the ferry office, Tom glanced over at the counter where a young, pretty girl was selling ferry tickets. Tom gave me a crazy look and I knew right then and there what he was thinking. I mouthed the word "no." Tom looked at me and shook his head like I was a wimp and I realized I was. We got back into the van and Tom started yelling at me to give him my cell phone, which I did. He then asked me if he could dial 411, which I told him was fine.

"Who are you going to call?"

"I'm calling the ferry and asking that girl out."

"What are you, nuts?"

Before I knew it, Tom was on the phone with the Orient Point ferry and was talking to a receptionist. I could only hear one side of the conversation, but it went something like this, Yes hello, this is Tom I was just delivering Dan's Papers (pause). Yes hello. Listen is there a girl there who works behind the counter that is young and has blonde hair? (Pause) Sammy? Yes Sammy. Can you put her on please? (Long pause) Yes hello is this Sammy? Hi this is Tom, I was just in there delivering Dan's Papers (pause). Well, I just wanted to call you there because I didn't want to embarrass you at work. I wanted to tell you that I think you are pretty and I was wondering if you would like to go out sometime. I live down in East Hampton and maybe we could have dinner or something (long pause, my heart was beating a hundred miles an hour). You would? Well, that's great! Okay then well what is your phone number? Uh-huh, okay great, I'll call you later then.

Tom got off the telephone then began celebrating in the van. He started jumping up in down in his seat as I was yelling and screaming, "I can't believe you just did that!" When we calmed down Tom told me that he felt like a million bucks.

I think too many guys, especially in my generation, wimp out when it comes to asking girls out and so I thought that I would tell this story. I don't think that it is really rocket science. It is just a little scary. My friend Tom, however, inspired me last Friday. I hope that if you are a guy reading this, you just became inspired, and I hope that if you are a girl reading this, you pass it along to a guy that needs a little pep talk.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

I hiked the Serpent's Back Trail a second time in the opposite direction and then continued west along Flaggy Hole Road. When I reached Old North Road, blazes were not visible. I continued for about a mile before I reached Fresh Pond Landing Road. I couldn't see any blazes on this trail either, but it finally enabled me to turn right (north), cross the railroad tracks, visit the Waterfence Overlook, and then continue east along the Paumanok Path (following the white rectangular blazes).

This four-mile section of the Paumanok Path runs close to the bluffs that overlook Block Island Sound. In some places the trail takes you directly to the overlooks, at other points you need to walk short spur trails to get a view of the Sound. About a mile east of the Waterfence Overlook, the trail passes by the ruins of an Indian house, basically a circle of rocks that you will miss if you aren't alert. The next mile of trail has sections that include few trees and few blazes; the trail tread is loose sand and is difficult to walk. The trail jogs south here and rejoins the Old North Road; it is wide and during the summer has some high grass (watch out for ticks). After a very short distance there is a spur trail that I enjoy taking north because it gives access to the shore at Quincetree Landing. This is a lovely place to rest and enjoy the water. Follow the north road for less than a mile and then the coastal route of the Paumanok Path past Rocky Point and Redmond's Bend and on to the parking area at the end of Navy Road. After walking an entire day without seeing another soul, I was greeted by four Doberman Pinschers off-leash. One of them seemed to take issue with me continuing to my car. To enforce his opinion he took some mild nips at my calf. Needless to say, I stood still and waited until his master arrived and got control of him. Dogs need to be on leashes in public places.

This County Park, at the end of Navy Road, has been called "Fort Pond Park," "Navy Road Park," and "Rod's Valley Park." It has recently been renamed the "Edward Vincent Ecker, Sr. Park" by County Legislator Jay Schneiderman who is advocating to provide $200,000 in funding in order to improve the parking and signage, and to generally clean up this 19.5-acre County-owned parcel. This park has enormous potential as a community recreational resource. It has a huge grassy field that could be used for a playground and a formal dog park. It has 800 feet of frontage on Block Island Sound with a large deep-water fishing dock and a boat-launching ramp. Of course, most importantly it provides access to a magnificent network of hiking trails.

Unfortunately, this park is difficult to find. Three "Ecker Park" signs are needed: one at Second House Road and Route 27, one at Second House Road and Shore Road, and one at the intersection of Shore Road and Navy Road.

When I returned home, I contacted Tom Dess, Superintendent of Montauk State Parks, about the blazing and he informed me that it is a result of a public service project created by Eric Rousell, an Eagle Scout with Troop 136, this past winter. I find it encouraging that the Boy Scouts are working on the trails and look forward to seeing the completion of this project.

If you are an energetic hiker you may wish to join Rick Whalen and East Hampton Trails Preservation Society on a 6-mile circular excursion through Hither Woods on Sunday, August 7 at 9:00 a.m. or you may wish to take the 9-mile hike I describe in this article on Saturday, August 20 at 9:00 a.m. Both hikes begin at the parking lot at the end of Navy Road. Anyone interested in ordering a map from the East Hampton Trails Preservation Society should call Richard at 631-324-1127.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

MESSINA JEWELRY - WESTHAMPTON BEACH

Opened since Memorial Day weekend, owners Nicole Messina and Susan Assalti bring you hand-crafted, one-of-a-kind pieces of jewelry that are not only sophisticated but also affordable. Susan and Nicole have established personal relationships with many new designers, and enjoy showcasing these unique collections. The store also offers an extensive line of vintage handbags and vintage costume jewelry from all over the country as well as a collection of baby and children's jewelry and designer watches. Special orders are always available. Weekend visitors and locals alike will find a dazzling array of jewelry options - from trend setting gems to classic design and customers are welcome to create a one-of-a-kind piece for their collection. Many a shopper has found that "perfect something" while browsing the store's selection.

OVATIONS DANCE ACADEMY - SOUTHAMPTON

Orlando Pena, owner and artistic director of Ovations Dance Academy of Southampton, brings to Southampton extensive experience in the field of performing arts. Just recently opened, the studio teaches from ages three to adult, beginners to professionals, ballet, pointe, jazz, tap, ballroom, hip hop, lyrical, voice and musical theatre. Orlando has toured the US and Europe performing and choreographing with numerous companies. "When you place them in their greatness that is what you get in return. I place my staff/friends and all the parents and dancers in the highest level of expectations. We get to see all of our Jonathons fly at Ovations." His students have been accepted in The Vail International Competition, New York City Ballet, Alabama School, The Rock School and The Joffrey Ballet just to name a few. He is also the founder of Ovations Dance Repertory Company, a non-profit organization. "Where the dreams of every child counts. We have been performing The Nutcracker Suite for the past five years in Patchogue and are thrilled about bringing the show to Southampton this winter as well." Summer and fall classes are available and open for registration.

RODGERS LARKIN FURNISHINGS - EAST HAMPTON

Officially opened this season, Rodgers Larkin Furnishings made its debut in East Hampton. Owners Katherine and Richard moved to the East End last year from Washington D.C. with a friendly, refreshing attitude and a need to be helpful and down to earth even though they are selling very high-end merchandise. Their knowledge and background in this field makes them both virtual walking furniture and antique encyclopedias.

KI BO @SAMADHI HOUSE - MONTAUK

After spending many summers in Montauk, Holistic Health Counselor Jennifer Cassetta has created and started her very own Korean Kickboxing program and classes called KI BO. With the help of Maureen Taylor, owner of the Samadhi House, KI BO-Montauk was born. KI BO is the hottest new fitness class combining cardio kickboxing, self defense and strength training using your own body weight. "Tighten your core, increase your flexibility, sweat, laugh and the surprise ending will leave you walking out of class feeling strong, powerful and centered. KI BO has impacted my core strength and body tone in a way that has been unmatched by marathon training and yoga," explains Jennifer. A Bio Instructor, Ms. Cassetta holds a second-degree black belt in HapKiDo, is a certified Personal Trainer and is a nationally licensed Holistic Health Counselor. She is a graduate of the Institute of Integrative Nutrition and runs a successful health counseling practice.

NERI - MONTAUK

Neri Shulman, a longtime Montauk local and NYC resident opened Neri just off Main Street in Montauk. After completely renovating the interior and exterior of the 1962 Levitt-style home in which the store is housed, Neri, a former fashion and interior designer, along with her daughter Juliette and the rest of her family, has created a peaceful and welcoming setting for her unique finds from years of collecting. At Neri you'll find unusual glassware displayed on an entire wall according to color. There is also a unique collection of furniture, linens, and tabletop items, along with great gifts for both young and old. This season Neri has added her own line of custom designed jewelry featuring sterling silver, gold plated and 14K gold decorated with semi-precious stones, Swarovski crystals and natural pearls. You can also enjoy Karl Stork's baked goods while you shop.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

Here it is, the middle of the summer and my tan is nowhere in sight. I have been shopping more than beaching these days; I think I'll just beach this week. Only kidding, let's shop!

Every day is a sale day at Jennifer Convertibles on County Road 39 in Southampton. There is a store full of affordable sofas for the guestroom, or any room in the house. You will find all the matching accessories here, including end and coffee tables. And the store promises fast delivery.

Hold everything! Hildreth's Department Store on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton (only) will save you up to 75% off on selected merchandise. I wait for sales like these to save money on great home and backyard items. Get going while the flavor lasts.....

If you're into floral design and want to meet floral designer and founder of Diane James Designs, she will be making a personal appearance at The Elegant Setting on Main Street in Southampton on Saturday, July 16, from 2 to 4 p.m. Diane's designs embody refined taste, classic and contemporary design ideals. Her three annual collections of silk flower arrangements are sold at Bergdorf Goodman in New York City, nationwide at Neiman Marcus, at select home décor and gift shops and in premier luxury goods catalogs. The Elegant Setting is the exclusive carrier of Diane James Designs in Southampton. While you're there previewing her 2005 fall collection, enjoy a glass of complimentary champagne!

At Max Studio on Main Street in Southampton there is a summer sale on some of their ladies' clothing and accessories. Now is the time to get all the bargains you can for summer, before they are all gone.

Are you looking for something really special and personal in jeans? Well, look no further than The Michael Perez Pop Art Gallery (631-287-1003) located at 43 Jobs Lane in Southampton. "Perez Jeans" are original, wearable art that will get you more than excited, knowing that no two pairs are alike. The artwork is hand-painted by the artist Michael Perez, on high-end designer jeans such as True Religion, Red Engine, Seven For All Mankind, Grail, Juicy Couture, Hudson Mavi, just to name a few. The sale prices start at $375 a pair and are worth every penny, I mean dollar! Go for it! You can also log onto the website at: www.michaelperez-gallery.com for a walk on the wild side in pop art.

Not quite the cold wind in August yet, but it's time to start shopping for those special items for late summer and fall at Berkley Cashmere on Jobs Lane in Southampton. Just in for fall are the most gorgeous cashmere blankets and throws. Sizes include King and Queen, from two ply to the softest six ply, in great patterns and interesting colors. Some are even reversible. A great hostess gift, don't you think?

Kimberly's East, at 2317 Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton, aka the Elaine Benson Gallery and Sculpture Garden, is taking the Hamptons by storm with her re-opened vintage clothing and accessories boutique. Kimberly Goff brings her collections of vintage clothing, scarves, beaded bags, and kimonos out of the closet and back into the gallery. In an attempt to encourage artists, the gallery is offering damaged scarves to collage artists for little or no cost. There are also plans for the gallery to create "new" clothing from vintage scarves and kimono fabrics. Many of us remember scarf kimonos, skirts, and dresses along with jackets made from lace curtains and quilt pieces. The gallery continues to show crafts, sculpture, paintings, African masks and artifacts, and artist created jewelry. There

From The Runway By Kelly Krieger

The Rock n' Roll of Fashion

Rock n' Roll has always had a strong influence over the fashion industry, from the days of Elvis sporting his rhinestone buckles and flared pants, to the Beatles English hippie – Sergeant Pepper style, to the grunge-look of Nirvana. Each generation of music has played a significant role in fashion.

This is one of the main reasons we had so many bad fashion "code blues." And where else can we find the biggest fashion disasters but the 80s? Yes, I fell victim to witnessing and even admiring the looks of many rock stars back then. On one side of my high school locker I had pictures of Duran Duran (suits and perfect hair – makeup too?) and on the other Def Leppard (big hair, shirtless or tank-topped and spandex). I have to say, they still look pretty good, but my taste has totally changed and, thankfully, so has theirs.

Jon Bon Jovi, who played only last week at the Stephen Talkhouse, went through many fashion transitions of his own. However, I think he's grateful to still have his hair after all that hair-spray abuse. The "Big Hair" bands of the 80s would not be the same without teased hair, tight pants and girls everywhere. But let's not bring back those tight leopard spandex pants just yet. Some trends are meant to stay in the past. My ex actually wore spandex shorts (not as bad) when he played the drums. Luckily for him he was hidden in the background. Yikes.

And then we had Madonna, Blondie and Pat Benatar who wore tight clothes, high heels and interestingly teased hairstyles. Actually, I think they always looked great, but those music videos were another story..... Blame it on the manager.

As time progressed, we started to see a big change in the "lack" of fashion. The grunge-look was the big hit in the early-mid 90s. Kurt Cobain's ripped sweaters, beat-up Converse sneakers and bed-head style became a popular look for many. I think it was the best thing for musicians, but a nightmare for the fashion industry. How could they package such a style? For once, it was all about the Rock n' Roll with no attention paid to fashion.

However, we eventually saw some young designers marketing the look in subtle ways.

Some of the biggest designers for rockers include; Vivian Westwood (one of Gwen Stefani's favorites), Betsey Johnson, Richard Tyler, Versace and Anna Sui. Their designs are more bold and risk-taking than many of their peers. And, if there's one thing rock stars love to do, it's stand out! The more outrageous, the better.

In recent fashion news, designer Hedi Slimane brought back a modern rocker look of the 60s with a hint of Givenchy and Dior at the Paris menswear show. That 50s and '60s rocker style always looks good. It worked for the Stray Cats when they reinvented the Rockabilly style of music and fashion.

However, the Britney Spears, Jessica Simpson and Jennifer Lopez look is not very creative, although they're simply following the rule – less is more. Music and fashion will always work side-by-side, and we can never anticipate what to expect next.

After all, a fashion show would be nothing without being accompanied by music and a musician would be lost without style.

Many people in the music industry are successful based on their looks, but it's their talent that will stand the test of time.

The Hollaback girl herself, Gwen Stefani, has been on the scene since the late 80s, and her unique style and flair for fashion continues to make its mark. In fact, many musical talents have ventured out into the design career themselves. P.Diddy has a line of clothing, as do Gwen Stefani, Jennifer Lopez and many more. Rockers will always be trendsetters and fashion icons. It's part of their livelihood to create their own look.

Ashley Dodgen-McCormick designs her own jewelry...this necklace of coral and freshwater pearls is just exquisite. "Olympia" necklace $795. Available special order at Saks 5th Avenue, 1 Hampton Rd., Southampton. (631) 283-3500 or www.ashajewels.co

This unique fragrance bottle contains the wonderful scent of Bond No. 9 "Little Italy." When's the next flight to Tuscany? Available at Saks 5th Avenue, 1 Hampton Rd., Southampton. (631) 283-3500

And you thought palm trees were only in the tropics. Lisa Tamburini is all smiles as she shows they're right here in the Hamptons. Handpainted Vlckl Hoyer designs $98. Available at Complements Lingerie, 2486 Main St., Bridgehampton. (631) 537-7770

Jean-Paul Gaultier swimsuit you say? Close. Karla Colletto orange swimsuit flatters big time. Corset-look creates a long lean waist and kicky skirt is divine. $216, in sizes 6-16. Available at Complements Lingerie, 2486 Main St., Bridgehampton. (631) 537-7770

Since purple is the complementary color to orange, we thought Jon Bon Jovi in his muscle shirt in East Hampton would work. What do you think?

Entre Nous in East Hampton hosted a fashion show to benefit Tony Duke's Boys & Girls Harbor Camp. Judie Zbeda models orange silk jacket and tank. She looks fantastic! Jacket $575, tank $175. Made in Italy. Available at Entre Nous, 37 Newtown Lane, East Hampton. (631) 324-8636. We hope it sells out.

Orange angel fish swimming in, er, on a pink tank. Have to have it. Manuel Canovas Fish Suits $192. Available at Complements Lingerie, 2486 Main St., Bridgehampton. (631) 537-7770. Look like a fish dish.

A Talbots peach linen dress looks wonderful with a whimsical Hawaiian pocketbook from an Ohau tourist shop. The shawl pulls it all together. Dress and shawl available at www.talbots.com.

Jessica Zaganczyk looks fresh and hip in her orange tank and lime-green skirt. We want it. JCrew tank $20, JCrew skirt $40. Available at JCrew, 46 Main St., East Hampton. (631) 324-5034.

Dining in the Hamptons

It is always great to find a hidden gem in the Hamptons. It's even better when they serve sangria. As I drove down the long stretch of Newtown Road in Hampton Bays, I felt like I was driving to a secret speakeasy, hidden from the public, and as I made a right into the Hampton Watercraft & Marine, I searched for any semblance of a restaurant, until I finally caught sight of a little blue sign directing me to make a right, down a narrow road which led to a unassuming parking lot. To my surprise, there, at the water's edge sat a little, white-shingled restaurant with a deck that practically projected over the Shinnecock Canal. The smell of fried fish was drifting from the kitchen window. My friend Kirk, not seeing the sign, parked in the marina's lot and walked across the parking lot. But there is another way to get to the Canal Café and Market – by boat.

We were greeted and seated by Lydia at an outside table overlooking the docks. The sun was setting behind the restaurant as the rosy fingers of dusk wrapped around the sky. To be honest, we ate a feast. We started with freshly fried plantain chips and a rich guacamole as we studied the menu and specials. The menu is classic light fare including appetizers like jalapeño poppers and clam chowder, and fried oyster po'boys. But for us the specials board was calling. Steamed mussels, clam fritters, lobster roll, grilled chipotle tuna over a jimica cole slaw, topped with tomato salsa, and Thai shrimp and scallops with lemon grass curry.

Now before I go any further, I'd like to explain that Canal Café & Market isn't your average Hamptons haunt. The silverware (plasticware) and napkins are served in a cardboard six-pack holder, the plates are disposable, and the mussels are served in a disposable aluminum container. I only mention this because the food doesn't exactly match the dinnerware.

I'd had conch fritters before and corn fritters, but never clam fritters, so it was a must, plus Lydia, who didn't steer us wrong all night, recommended them. They were great. Hot, crispy, with a fresh doughy inside, served with a creamy horseradish sauce. The mussels were tender, sweet, and ample. The sangria was quite nice. It was lacking in bitter tannins, making it favorable and refreshing.

The lobster roll was ample and served on crisp cibata bread. The fresh lobster meat that dominated the sandwich was stacked so high it filled Kirk, leaving him to take home half of the sandwich, and the side was a simple shoestring fries.

I, on the other hand, could not get enough of the grilled tuna. Ordered medium-rare, the temperature was perfect. The chipotle rub added flavor and texture to the large portioned steak. The bed of jicama slaw could have been served as a meal unto itself. The texture of the jicama, the leafy greens and coriander tossed in a light lemon juice was a real delight and an overwhelmingly successful alternative to the everyday cabbage coleslaw.

The Thai shrimp and scallops was served on a bed of rice resting atop banana leaves. Once again the portion was quite large. The plentiful scallops were attentively prepared, carefully not overcooked and the shrimp, plum tomatoes, and peppers melded together in the sweet lemongrass coconut curry.

I really had no room for dessert, but of course I'm not exactly one to turn down a sour cream raspberry blueberry torte. So . . . I had one, while Kirk opted for the chocolate torte. Both were rather good and a nice way to finish the meal.

After the meal, I had a chance to chat with owners Paul and Parker Hodges. Although Canal Café and Market was only opened in May, the Hodges brothers are not new to dining in the Hamptons.

Parker spent sixteen years as head chef and seven years as partner, while Paul worked as chef at East Hampton's famed Barefoot Contessa. They also run the very successful Hodges & Hodges Caterers and a concession at the Buckskill Tennis Club. For years they had been looking for a restaurant that combined their favorite activities: fishing, boating, and cooking. It seems they have found it here at the Canal Café and Market.

The Canal Café and Market is open seven days a week for breakfast, lunch and dinner. They have live music Sunday nights and offer a restaurant employee night Mondays when employees receive 20% off.

Dan's Guide TO BELLPORT

By Dan Rattiner

Everyone says that there is one village out here on the East End that is a big secret. A real gem on the water. It is the Village of Bellport, perched on the edge of the Great South Bay, halfway between New York and Montauk, and about fifteen minutes to the west of Westhampton.

At one time, big things were expected from this village. Settled in 1665, the native American Unkechaugs sold this place they called Occumbomock, to some English settlers from Setauket for four coats, six pounds and ten shillings. Occumbomock meant "opposite the fishing grounds," and the fishing grounds they were referring to were in the Bay, and in what is today known as the Old Fire Island Inlet.

Docks were built at the end of what is now Bellport Lane, and soon this village began to prosper, as a port, for the schooners and freighters that came in to this sheltered harbor. But in 1837, not long after John and Thomas Bell built larger landing docks and gave the town its name, two ships wrecked at the entrance to the inlet. And as they could not be moved out, the inlet silted up and filled in, until finally, the old inlet was sealed up. Bellport as a major trading port was not to be.

Bellport did, however, develop as a gentle village for farmers, shipbuilders, fishermen and cordwood sellers. A downtown was built with the lovely stores you see there today. Beautiful residential streets were built, lined with trees, and with glorious Victorian homes for the summer people. By the 1890s, there were docks for sailboats and other pleasure craft and small but beautiful hotels. Novelist Mary Roberts Rhinehart stayed here. Bernard Baruch fished here. So did Daniel Webster, though a lot earlier.

In the summer, a ferry to the ocean beach takes people out from the docks downtown for a ten minute ride to the Bellport Beach on Fire Island two miles away. People enjoy the small bay beach right next to downtown. Or they go crabbing or flounder fishing in the shallow waters of Great South Bay. They visit the local museum, attend the live theatre productions at the Gateway Playhouse, fish off the dock, or just walk around downtown enjoying the shops, restaurants, antique stores, ice cream shops and galleries. The quaint old village is festooned with flowers, lined with picket fences and on Fridays has concerts or outdoor films in the evening at the bandstand down by the dock. (Once they did Creature from the Black Lagoon.)

Yes, Bellport is a well-kept secret, a quiet backwater of a town that once might have been a port, but never quite made it. And that is all the better for all of us today.

Reel Art at the Bellport Film Society

Film and movies – for most the two words are synonymous, but a small percentage of the projector-watching public would raise a red flag in protest. Movies are generally the super summer blockbusters seen at the local multiplex with a bucket of over-buttered popcorn and a jumbo Cherry Coke. Star Wars is a movie. Don't get me wrong, I liked Star Wars, and I love any excuse to eat over-buttered popcorn, but no matter how you look at it, Star Wars is not a film. It is definitely entertaining, but it is not high art.

Film is beauty. It is Rodin and Edward Hopper; it is an artistic medium like any other, like bronze or oils. To say film and movies are the same is selling film, and yourself, short. It would be the same as grouping a Hallmark birthday card with John Donne – just because it rhymes doesn't make it poetry.

As the world becomes a more interconnected place, as cultures merge, mingle, and influence one another, the art of film (foreign and domestic) has become increasingly a part of our society. Some would argue that film, in its most pristine form, began in the United States and whether or not that is true, European and Asian directors have made great strides in displacing the U.S. as the epicenter of "film as art." Fellini, Godard, Zhang are names that may be unfamiliar to the general public, but to the members of the Bellport Film Society, these directors are as recognizable as Spielberg, Scorsese, and Coppola.

Back in 2000, while at the Bellport staple Kitchen + Coffee's proprietor, Thomas V. Schultz, was speaking with his friend Malcolm Morley. He asked Malcolm, "What do you think Bellport needs?" In his distinct British accent, Malcolm replied, "A film society." And so it began. Schultz, a master organizer, with the help of Joe Varsalona, got the ball rolling. They formed a board with various members of the community including noted actress Isabella Rossellini and set to bringing films to Bellport.

Now in its fifth year, the Film Society has grown by leaps and bounds. Its role in the community is one of education, experimentation, and, of course, entertainment. The bimonthly showings are held Saturdays at the Bellport Community Center and attendance at each showing varies depending on the film. It seems that some of the more poignant, foreign language films are less popular, despite their brilliance, while the occasional showings of classics like My Fair Lady pull in the crowds. In a controversial move this year the Society decided to show D.W. Griffith's Birth of a Nation, a spectacular silent film, despite its racist attitudes. In an attempt to bring the entire experience of the silent film era to life, the showing featured a live piano accompaniment. It was an overwhelming success and its cinematography is as poignant as it was back in 1915. To facilitate discussion, each film is followed by a speaker connected to the film, whether the film's writer or an expert on the topic. For example at the showing of Kandahar, the Society featured an Afghani woman who led a discourse on life in Afghanistan.

Taking advantage of the fine summer weather, the Film Society holds their summer season outdoors at the Bellport Village Docks. The shows begin at dark, circa 8:30 p.m., and include an array of classics, before returning to more serious films in the fall.

As a not-for-profit organization, the Film Society is volunteer-based and although the suggested donation at each showing helps, the acquisition of international film reels can be very expensive. The Film Society doesn't have "members" in the traditional sense, but is open to anyone interested in film. It holds an annual benefit to minimize the operating costs, but it is not enough, especially now that the Society offers a Bellport High School scholarship in the name of one of its founding members, Ray Rueger.

It is rare these days to find a group whose love of fine film inspires them to join together and found an organization designed specifically to bring that love into the open, allowing those who may be unfamiliar with film a chance to experience true art.

If you are interested in becoming a volunteer or supporter, please contact the Bellport Film Society at (631) 286-1910. Although half the summer is gone, here are the remaining films being shown outdoors.

Dan's Guide TO BELLPORT

Who's Here

By Kelly Krieger

Renowned artist and owner of the Ratio Gallery in Bellport, Marlies Ihmels, has magnificently recreated Bellport's Livingston Road, and we are delighted to have it grace the cover of Dan's Papers' first Bellport supplement.

Ihmels originally hails from Germany by the North Sea, and from an early age has been inspired by nature to create on canvas the beauty she sees in her surroundings.

"I suppose destiny would be the right word to explain my being here," she says of Bellport. She compares Bellport to "Sleeping Beauty," referring to what she believes to be the rebirth of a charming historic village by the sea. A once very popular resort spot, Bellport has become revitalized through new talents, great restaurants, shops and a close-knit community. These are all factors that draw people in, as it did to Ihmels.

To categorize Marlies Ihmels' oil paintings would take away from her unique style and technique. When viewing art, we have to remind ourselves that it should not be defined or labeled, but rather enjoyed and admired, which was exactly how I approached Ihmels' collection. Her body of work is quite impressive. She studied the complex techniques of the "Old Masters" to create her own techniques. "Every artist that has existed in history has something special we can draw from," she said.

Ihmels not only paints, but teaches aspiring artists at her studio and in the gallery, what she has learned and studied over the years. Ihmels studied in Europe and New York and holds an MFA from the New York Academy of Art in addition to a BA in Fashion Design (which was her original career for many years) from Hochschule fuer Gestaltung located in Bremen, Germany.

The painting technique Ihmels uses requires many layers of paint and an extreme amount of patience. The time it takes to allow the paint to dry properly between each layer seems overwhelming. That is, unless you're passionate about your craft. "It is a very slow process that can take anywhere from a few weeks to several months to complete," she told me.

Ihmels was commissioned to paint "Livingston

Marlies Ihmels
Artist

Road" in the fall of 2004. She began to paint during the winter months, before the towering historic sycamore trees were lush and green. She was quite familiar with the vibrant trees and managed to create the painting through memory and a feeling from within. And so, her labor of love speaks for itself. When viewing the painting, I felt as though I could step inside and touch the leaves. Ihmels' use of color and light makes the painting appear alive. "It was an honor to be asked to paint this magnificent road," she said.

When selecting a subject, it's simple. "I find something in nature that makes a connection with the environment. I compose them and they take on a character of their own," Ihmels said. Many of Ihmels' subjects include fruit and vegetables, but she has yet to eat one of her subjects.

The titles of her paintings are also simple, which allows the observer to be imaginative and to interact with the work. A painting of four pears positioned side by side quickly translates to four people talking. Ihmels told me that a respect and appreciation for the object helps create a nurturing and compassionate feeling that is different for everyone. I guess all objects can have character if we allow them to come to life and open our minds.

From the moment I walked through the front door of the gallery one rainy afternoon, I felt an immediate connection. The combination of Ihmels' calming voice matched with the quaint space in her gallery conjures a strong sense of peacefulness. Perhaps the connection comes from a shared passion for fashion, our German heritage, or love for the sea, but whatever the reason, I'm grateful to have experienced her art, sensitivity and love for Bellport. Bellport is a special town like no other, and like any work-of-art, it is one-of-a-kind.

Ratio Gallery offers visitors the opportunity to view a variety of local artists as well as Ihmels' personal works. Next time you're in the neighborhood, drop in for a visit. You will leave with a new perspective and a sense of appreciation for objects, nature and creative space that allows for endless imagination. Ratio Gallery is located at 10 Bell Street in Bellport. For more information, call 286-4020.

Dan's Guide TO BELLPORT

It's a marriage made in heaven for Patricia Trainor and Executive Chef Taylor Alonso, owners of The Bellport. The two restaurateurs amicably share a love for fine food, great style and superb service. As you enter this quaint village eatery it feels as though you've been transported to a far away European destination.

The décor flaunts a romantic French Country appeal with an eclectic mix of antique wrought iron tables and chairs adorned with whimsical accent pieces while artwork by acclaimed artist Malcolm Morley dress the walls. Every nook of the restaurant offers a warm and cozy space that is most welcoming for gatherings with family and friends or intimate evenings for two.

After getting settled in with two glasses of Chardonnay, a basket of fresh warm homemade rosemary bread was delivered. We perused the elegantly script-written menu, created by Patricia each week, but decided to have a tasting of several recommended dishes in order to experience some of the highlights on the menu.

Corn Crusted Oysters opened the evening on a great note. The delicately fried oysters paired with a fresh corn sauce were mildly sweet inside with the perfect balance of a crisp outside cornmeal coating. Up next was The Bellport's special organic green salad made with greens grown in their backyard garden. A medley of snow peas, fennel, yellow and red tomatoes and other fresh vibrantly flavored greens were dressed in light vinaigrette and kissed with edible flowers to make a refreshing second course.

We took a brief intermission before our next dish and chatted a bit with Patricia and Taylor. The two met as teenagers in Washington DC and have never been apart. They've both traveled extensively and lived in Manhattan, where Patricia was a successful fashion publicist, and London, where Taylor trained at Cordon Bleu. After their children reached a certain age, they decided to move from Manhattan to Bellport and open a restaurant. Their dream was to find a place where families could enjoy fine dining in a relaxed atmosphere. The Bellport, formerly an old inn, was the perfect choice.

The Bellport is entering its fifteenth year and has gained a loyal following. The restaurant has received excellent reviews by several critics and was awarded four stars by the New York Times. I could definitely see why.

After a few minutes passed, our waitress, Lauren, refilled our wine glasses and our next course was presented. A dish of homemade Fettuccini made with local little neck clams (my favorite), mussels, saffron and other fine herbs was divine. The sauce was light and creamy without being too rich. And if that wasn't enough for our preview before the main entrees, a serving of Seared Rib Eye Tuna accompanied with scallion sticky rice and apricot chutney created a mouthwatering delight.

Every dish at The Bellport is almost too pretty to eat, but after you pause for a moment to appreciate the artistic creativity, the temptation takes over. Which brings us to our main courses: Black Bass with lemon grass broth and glass noodles paired with asparagus and local Free-range Duck Breast served with tamale in a banana leaf-filled with duck confit topped zucchini sauce and toasted pumpkin seeds. The Black Bass tasted as though it was caught moments before, with a flaky texture and freshness. The duck breast was cooked to a pink perfection and melted in our mouths.

A few other signature dishes include: Buttermilk Fried Chicken Breast prepared with a mushroom fricassee and chived mashed potatoes, and a Grilled Rib-eye Steak marinated and served with pickled potato fries and green onion chutney.

The Bellport also offers an array of nightly specials and what they like to call the Monday night "Recession Special." They first started the recession special when they opened in 1990 to accommodate their customers (3-course meal for $18).

After our meals were complete, we decided to have an after dinner drink and, believe it or not, share a dessert. The Short Cake with coconut crème and a berry coolie mixture of fresh blueberries, strawberries, clementines and sweet strawberry sauce was the perfect ending to a most enjoyable dining experience.

Summer Sundays at Brookhaven Lab

Maybe the beach beckons, or you've got some barbecuing to tend to, but at least one Sunday during the summer, take a break from the usual and visit the home of six Nobel Prizes that's located right in the middle of Long Island: Brookhaven National Laboratory.

Funded primarily by the U.S. Department of Energy, Brookhaven Lab carries out research in numerous areas, from searching for cures for maladies such as addiction and obesity to exploring matter as it existed in the first millionth of a second after the beginning of the universe. The Lab also operates major scientific facilities that are open to researchers from around the world.

Summer Sundays will be offered from July 17 through August 21. Tours and activities are free and no reservations are needed. Visitors may arrive any time between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. All visitors age 16 and over must bring a photo ID.

Featuring new segments this year, the educational and entertaining "Whiz Bang Science Show" will be staged at 10:30 a.m., noon, 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. every Sunday during the summer program. An exhibit of artifacts from Camp Upton – the U.S. Army base that occupied the Laboratory site during World Wars I and II – will be on display. Visitors may test their creative and problem-solving skills at the Brain Teasers exhibit, which features 20 challenges for puzzle enthusiasts of all ages.

Also featured will be a special exhibit on the World Year of Physics 2005, which marks the 100th anniversary of Albert Einstein's publications of three papers that laid the groundwork for modern physics.

Brookhaven Lab scientists will be available each Sunday to answer questions.

July 17 – Life Sciences

Explore the fascinating world of biological and biomedical research. See a demonstration of genome sequencing; learn about the Scanning Transmission Electron Microscope, a super-powerful microscope that allows scientists to see the intricate details of living organisms; and find out how biosensors can detect heavy metals in soils, and more.

July 24 – Chemistry and Nanoscience

Learn how Brookhaven scientists get an inside glimpse of the workings of the human brain to better understand such problems as alcoholism, addiction and obesity. See a facility that scientists use to study ultra-fast chemical reactions and create your own chemical reaction – make slime! Learn about the up-and-coming field of nanoscience, the study of materials at the scale of one billionth of a meter.

July 31 – Science Museum

Explore fun-filled interactive exhibits at the Laboratory's Science Museum. This year, a new visualization theater will be available for 3-D viewing of science-related themes.

Also, the Long Island ScienCenter will feature a display on the physics of toys, and a Goudreau Math Museum exhibit will feature stimulating math games. Be entertained by a science magician while discovering the science behind the tricks.

August 7 – National Synchrotron Light Source

The Light Source is one of the world's brightest sources of x-ray, infrared and ultraviolet light, and over 2,000 scientists from around the world perform experiments at the facility each year. Research there has contributed to advances in medicine, computers, materials, space travel, and many other areas. See the "Carnival of Light" displays and learn from scientists about their groundbreaking research at the facility.

August 14 – Celebration Sunday

To celebrate the World Year of Physics 2005, see the special show called "Einstein and Beyond," repeated throughout the day. Also, witness the Laboratory's glassblower at work.

Enjoy the narrated bus tour of the Laboratory with the focus on the history of the buildings and the site. Several Brookhaven Lab recreational clubs will feature displays, and the BNL Music Club will perform some of their favorite popular tunes.

August 21 – Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC)

Visit RHIC, Brookhaven Lab's premiere accelerator, where physicists from around the world are studying a form of matter thought to have existed at the beginning of the universe. Visit RHIC's 2.5-mile tunnel, filled with superconducting magnets, and see detectors as big as a house.

The Laboratory is located 1 1/2 miles north of the LI Expressway. For more information, call (631) 344-2651, or visit the Brookhaven Lab website: www.bnl.gov.

Dan's Guide TO BELLPORT

There's a new concept for dining out, and Painters' of Bellport holds the secret. The key to any successful business is to provide something unique, something of quality or in this case something magical. Who would have imagined that two dads who met while picking up their daughters at school in New York City would end up years later co-owning a restaurant?

Owners Larry Wolhandler and Steven Laird were both looking for a change and a new direction in life. Steve, a former NYC lawyer and co-owner of a rep business for fashion photography, and Larry, an artist – "the painter," who also had previously owned another restaurant, found their way out to Bellport. They were both frequent visitors. They stumbled upon the abandoned "Better 'Ole" (restaurant) which comes from the expression "If you find a better 'ole, run for it". The building needed a lot of work in order to transform its beaten down condition. The very unappealing red carpet and mirrored décor throughout had to go, and go quickly. And, so herein lies the "something magical."

"Wonder Twin Powers Activate. Form an open airy creative space where people can dine, dance and admire art (and buy paintings by local artists)." Sorry, I think I had a 70s Super Friends cartoon flashback for a moment. But, Steve and Larry are great friends, great business partners and great creative minds. And, when all the ingredients were combined, success was inevitable.

Painters' celebrates its 8th year this month and is looking forward to their continued success with Executive Chef Luis Marin and General Manager Ian Nelson at the helm. Chef Marin created a menu that boasts varied influences from Asian to Latin, French and Thai just to name a few. In addition, each night he offers unique specials that are not commonly found in other restaurants.

On this particular evening, we sat at the comfy high top wood tables alongside Painters' spacious bar area. The atmosphere is upbeat and conversation flows throughout. There is also a quieter, more formal dining space. However, we were there to have a good time and that's exactly what Larry and Steve want their customers to experience.

After reviewing the menu, we all decided on a few favorites to share. For starters, we ordered Asiago Garlic Bread (I could have eaten the entire loaf – overflowing with cheese), Calamari served with a chipotle dipping sauce (light and crunchy) and Tuna Sushi served on crispy wonton chips and paired with an Asian slaw and wasabi aioli. The combination of the wonton and tuna was a refreshing alternative to the norm.

In between our appetizers, our waitress Rachel delivered us Painters' Purist Margarita, a Mojito and Blue Diablo (all from their new drink menu created by Greg). Yum. It was time to move on to the next course, so we shared a chopped salad (made with lentils, mesclun, maytag bleu, tomato cracked black pepper tossed in a red wine vinaigrette), organic greens, southwestern nicoise (prepared with fresh tuna, avocado, haricot verts, cherry tomato, picholine olives, mesclun and roasted potato) and mango, pine nut, and goat cheese salad (tossed in a champagne vinaigrette). Each salad was equally refreshing made with the freshest crisp ingredients that come directly from the Hamlet Organic Garden in Brookhaven, or The Hog.

Luis makes even the most basic dish look and taste complex and interesting. I suppose we could have ended the meal on the leaner side, but we had to continue with our main entrees. The Brick Press chicken grill, cooked under a brick with lemon and rosemary pan juices, was outstanding. The juiciness of the meat was held in by a crisp flavorful outer skin. Rocco's Shrimp was prepared with a mixture of tomato, capers, fresh basil and gorgonzola garlic butter on top of angel hair pasta. And, the Pine Nut Crusted Wild Halibut was served with oven-roasted potatoes and grilled asparagus. The Wild Halibut was light and brought me back to a healthier reality after indulging a bit too much earlier in the evening. A few other standouts include Painters' Thai mixed Grill and The Flatiron Steak. A children's menu is also available.

And if all that fun, food and conversation wasn't enough, we shared several decadent desserts that included a velvety Crème Brûlée, Chocolate/Coffee Pudding Cake, fresh Strawberry Shortcake served on a grilled pound cake with whipped cream and a Brownie Bomber. We could not eat another morsel of food. Our evening was perfectly complete.

Scooters – The Coolest Way To Sail

One of Bellport's great claims to fame is not the beautiful tree-lined streets or the rich history as one of the first vacation towns. It comes, rather, from a sport that is unknown to the majority of the world. A sport that moves at high speeds, that flirts with danger, and that commands agility and precision. That sport? Scootering. For those natives of Bellport, the term "scootering" is a familiar one. But beyond the borders of this little town, a little background might be in order.

In a town with a summer vibe but a seasonal climate, people had to learn to improvise, especially when it came to their affinity for sailing. For a long time, when the leaves fell from the trees and the Great South Bay started to freeze over, sailing enthusiasts sadly pulled their boats from their slips and stowed them away for winter, looking longingly at the icy water with no way to enjoy it. Around the turn of the century, though, ice scootering (or ice sailing) became popular. Perhaps it was to bring supplies across the water to Fire Island in the winter months, or perhaps it was so that fishermen wouldn't have to sacrifice important work due to icy conditions. But either way, this iceboat was born of a Bellport winter. The traditional Bellport scooter has 10 foot blades and is shaped like a pumpkin seed. The boats can reach speeds of about 65 miles per hour. They were used primarily for ice fishing and for racing. Thus, the many Bellport denizens who spent their springs and summers at the race tracks were able to keep betting throughout the winter.

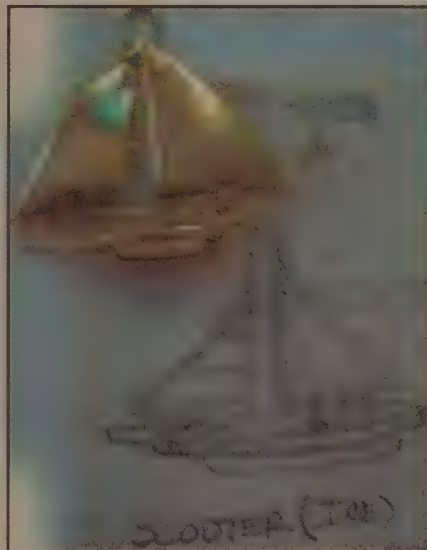

The ice scooter has no rudder. It is, instead, steered by the jib. Scooters generally hold two people, and they can go in the water in case the ice happens to crack. But they are designed to skate over the ice.

The first organized scooter race occurred in 1903 off the coast of Patchogue. The Bellport Scooter Club was created in 1904, and in 1921 its name was changed to the South Bay Scooter Club. There are over 70 members in this club today, and they meet all through the winter at the Bellport Bay Yacht Club.

The racing rules of ice scootering are complex. According to the official Bellport Ice Scootering website (www.ice-scooter.org), there are twenty detailed rules that must be followed. There are five judges who officiate the game, and like any other sport, there are fouls and violations that will lead to your expulsion from the competition. In a race for a trophy, the course must be approximately 3 miles per lap and must be 4 times around. Or it could be less than four laps, but it must be 12 miles in total. The teams must sail the course in 60 minutes or less to be called a race.

In other races, without a trophy, the course must be approximately 3 miles per lap and 3 laps total, or the course must be 9 miles in all, and it must be finished in 45 minutes or less to be called a race.

Because of the significance of ice scootering to the identity and history of Bellport Village, a special tribute to the sport has emerged. Bellport Jewelers created a miniature scale model of an ice scooter in sterling silver and in 14K gold. Master goldsmith Peter (Pietro) Romano replicated photographs given to him by his friend Lee DiClemente, who is a member of the South Bay Scooter Club. Peter sketched it out, then sculpted each piece out of wax. He then cast it into gold. Each piece of scooter jewelry consists of seven pieces and takes several hours to finish. Peter customizes these tiny models with the sailing number, and each is stamped "Bellport" on the back. Peter is an accomplished jeweler who has made pieces for several celebrities and musicians.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

The quaint and charming village of Bellport, population 2,800, only 60 miles from New York City and about 30 miles from the East End, offers wonderful shopping opportunities in its shopping district on Main Street, or as the locals know it, South Country Road and beyond. Bellport has a whimsical variety of shops, some of which I felt the need to include in this shopping column. Let's do some Bellport shopping!

At Donna Waters Lifestyle, 125 Main Street, (631-286-3901), there is an eclectic selection of special lifestyle clothing that include jackets, Sarah Pacini tops ($225), linen dresses ($235), fabulous orange sequined pants ($210) and sexy black camisoles ($35) just to name a few.

The Village Silversmith Gallery, 149 Main Street (631-286-1660) has a unique selection of silver and gold jewelry, one-of-a-kind jewelry, fine art and sculpture and more that qualifies for the perfect gift for everyone on your shopping list. Hot this summer is the twelve strand amber and turquoise beaded necklace that sells for $360 and the 14k earrings with pink tourmaline, citrine, labrodorize, aquamarine and 9mm Tahitian pearl dangles, $575. These are just a few of the many, many fabulous pieces that are a perfect accessory to any outfit.

Summer Salt, 136 Main Street, (631-286-4638) is another special shop that features a unique blend of casual attire, accessories and gifts for you and your home. Here you can focus on casual relaxed lifestyle names like Michael Star Tees, Allen Allen, Rebecca Beeson Tees and so much more. Summer Salt also carries the "Barefoot Dreams" line for infants, toddlers, and adults. Let's not forget the men in our lives. Look for Indigo Palms, Tommy Bahama, and O'Neill just to name a few, and a select array of home accents and giftware.

Phoenix Fine Arts Gallery, conveniently located in the center of the village at 139 Main Street (631-776-0811), represents over twenty-five local artists providing new shows monthly. Owned and operated by five artists and considered a hybrid gallery with several levels of membership, the price ranges are affordable. Through the application of the latest technology, the gallery is designed to act as three galleries in one. The gallery specializes in original work that provides a well-lit, multi-level hanging space, in a lower, main and upper level. A sliding storage system provides additional space and a computer image database provides an in-house viewing media for more of the gallery artists. You can log onto their website at: www.phoenixfineartsgallery.com for complete information.

How about Inside Out, 144 South Country Road, (631-286-8370), for home and garden necessities and accessories? This adorable shop is filled with flowering plants, pottery, candles, garden tools and shoes, furniture, home and garden décor and gifts. Don't pass up the best sellers that include the hostess gift basket for $19.99, the Guy Wolff Medieval urn for $60, and the glass cube vase for $14.99. There are gifts for her and him for under $25, and bath and body and accessories to choose from. I especially loved the Country Rooster ($48) made of terra cotta that brings country charm to any room. This is a must-shop stop.....

A studio not to be missed is David Ebner located at 12 Bell Street (one block south of Main Street in Bellport). David Ebner is known for his studio custom furniture, decorative accessories that include bronze candleholders and alabaster lamps. It's best to call for an appointment at 631-286-4523.

One of the area's best kept secrets in travel is Trotta's Cruise & Vacation Store at 146 South Country Road. If you want old-fashioned personal service and competitive prices on all-inclusive vacations and tours, this is the place to go. What a great concept! Call Trotta's at 631-386-7329 for information on your cruises and vacations.

At 12 Bellport Lane at The Workout Studio (631-286-7812), you can move and groove and shed some pounds in a friendly environment. This quaint little studio has lots of exercise equipment and services that include circuit training, treadmills, bikes, elliptical steppers, weight benches, dumbbells from five to fifty pounds, balls, and more. The fitness classes include body sculpting, Pilates, yoga and personal training. There are TVs and music and even baby-sitting for children age three and up. You can also enjoy some fresh fruit that is presented daily.

Do I love the name of this quaint little shop, Carla Marla's Ice Cream Parlor at 8 Bellport Lane, (631-286-0044)! It is nestled in the heart of Bellport Village with so many offerings, some of which brings me way back to the good old days. With its outdoor seating and premium quality ice cream, gourmet coffee and espresso, home-baked goods and candy for kids of all ages as well as beautiful handmade gourmet gift baskets that make a great hostess gift, you are sure to come back for more, time after time. Carla Marla is also known as a famous hot spot for the kids to meet, eat, and greet!

The Moroccan themed "An Evening At the Oasia" fundraiser event was held on June 25th, 2005 for the Boys and Girls Club of the Bellport Area, Graciously hosted by Leslie Marshall and Bill Weld. The former Governor of Massachusetts and his wife (who serve on the Development Committee Board for the Club) bought their pictureque Bellport home two years ago after being lured by "Dan's Papers" to a vacation on Long Island. Under a huge white tent on the specious lawn of their bellport home overlooking the Great South Bay, over 400 guests participated in a Silent Auction, and dined and danced throughout the night. DJ "Workhorse", the "Steel Drum Band" of the Boys & Girls Club of Bellport, and belly dancer Rima Khoury provided the musical entertainment Approximately $80,000 was raised for the Boys and Girls Club of Bellport.

The Hotels of Bellport

As one of the first resort communities on Long Island, Bellport was home to some of the most beautiful hotels in the country. Unfortunately, most of them have either been destroyed or have faded from their former brilliance. But after perusing through the browning photographs, one can see how magnificent they must have been in their heydays.

People were attracted to Bellport in the mid-1800s because of its accessibility to the city and its rural character. By the 1870s, boarding houses were becoming hotels, and Bellport reached its boom. Extremely wealthy patrons arrived on the new Long Island Rail Road and by stagecoach. But after the stock market crash, business slowed considerably, and many hotels had to be torn down. By the late 1930s and early 1940s, all the hotels were gone except for the Wyandotte, which lasted until the late 1950s. Luckily, the historic military base Camp Upton was used for the Brookhaven National Laboratory, so it was not demolished.

One of the first massive houses to be erected was the house of Captains Thomas and John Bell. It was a double house, built so that the two families could be together while the captains were away at sea.

In 1833, the Bell House started providing accommodations for students from out-of-town who were enrolled at the Bellport Classical Institute. The house was then enlarged so that the Bells could accommodate more summer visitors, and by 1900, it became known as the Mallard Inn. The Mallard Inn was purchased by the Raymonds in 1911, but like so many other mansions in Bellport, it was torn down in the 1930s. Now, the plot of land where the house once stood is the village parking lot.

The Bell House, c. 1911

In 1860, the Titus House, once a private estate built in the early part of the century, was enlarged into a boarding house to fit 50 guests. It became known as Hampton Hall. In the 1950s, the house was torn down and the lot was subdivided and sold.

The Bay House was one of the longest lasting hotels in town. It was built in 1874 as a luxury hotel. Around 1900, it was sold to the Jewish Working Girls Vacation Society of New York, who used it as a summer camp for the very privileged. In 1946, it became a summer camp for boys, and then in 1950, it was purchased by the village. The building was torn down and the land transformed into a park. The foundation of the lovely front porch was incorporated into the base of the bandstand that still stands today.

The Goldthwaite Inn, later called Grasspatch Hotel, began as a bed-and-breakfast in the 1880s. Mr. and Mrs. Goldthwaite saw its potential as a larger boarding house, and they built a few cottages on the grounds, which extended out to the bay.

The Wyandotte Hotel was the largest of Bellport's buildings. It sprawled out on an L-shaped property, toward the bay. Its docks, sunrooms, and lounges hosted some of the most influential people of that time. The Wyandotte suffered the same fate as almost all the other Bellport beauties, and was torn down in the late 1950s.

Of all the hotels that went up in Bellport's booming decades, only one remains. It was built in 1898 on Bellport Lane. Though it no longer has the commanding presence it once possessed, having lost its center tower and its wooden shingles, it is still an important part of Bellport's history. It is home to the Chowder House Restaurant and a few apartments now.

But even though many of the buildings that made Bellport one of the most desirable towns in the country have come and gone, the charming sentiment of the town lives on. It has managed to resist the encroachment of suburbanization, upholding its identity as a respite from the chaos of the city. It is interesting to explore, though, the rise and development of a summer community in relation to the constructing and demolishing of its hotels.

Gateway Playhouse – Broadway to Bellport

One of the true signs that the long cold winter has departed from the shores of Long Island is the opening night of the new season of the Gateway Playhouse in Bellport. Beginning in May, you will be filled with the thrill of anticipation as you walk into the auditorium of this charming country-style but really state-of-the-art, five-hundred-seat theater, waiting for the first notes from the orchestra and 'curtain up' – not that too many modern productions still have a curtain!

The fact that this year marks the fifty-fifth anniversary of this venture is a tribute to a long line of people with a vision. Although it is doubtful if back in the 1950s, when the Pomeran family moved from Far Rockaway and opened a hotel in the mansion house of a Bellport estate, that they would have dared to believe their initial involvement with the local Bellport Summer Theater would grow into today's Gateway Playhouse, a theatre where seasoned Broadway performers compete to be cast in leading roles in major productions of musicals of all genres.

The barn on the property was converted into a theater that sufficed until 1962 when demand for tickets required an expansion plan. Harry Pomeran and his son David oversaw the construction of the new five-hundred-seat Main Stage Playhouse, but after various members of the Pomeran family, including David, married and moved away from Bellport, Ruth, the youngest daughter and her husband, Stan Allan, became producers in 1974. Their two children, Robin Joy and Paul, took over the running of the enterprise in the late 1970s.

It would be wrong to believe that from then on all would be plain sailing. Gateway suffered the usual growing pains of any business, as well as ongoing problems with a few residents who feared that the increasing success would bring too much noise and traffic to the vicinity, and they also had to learn the nuances of working with the unions who represent artists and musicians. When Bellport Village, during the 1990s, placed Gateway as part of its newly created cultural and arts district, this went a very long way towards ensuring that Gateway could continue to operate in Bellport. Today Gateway Playhouse is the only full Actors Equity Professional Musical Theater on Long Island.

In its early days, the theater produced a variety of plays including works by Chekhov and Shakespeare. Eleanor Roosevelt named Gateway as The Official International Theater of the United Nations in 1951 but after the first musical production of Gypsy in the newly constructed theater, Gateway continued on the road to becoming one of the major musical theaters in the country. Incidentally, probably their best known protégées have been Robert Duvall, who performed on stage while still a college drama student, and Gene Hackman, who was part of the apprentice program.

Apart from developing their reputation as one of the top regional theaters in the country, Robin Joy and Paul Allan worked hard to develop young tal-

A Stroll Through Bellport's Heritage

From the street, the Bellport-Brookhaven Museum Complex is nearly unrecognizable. The only thing that distinguishes the picturesque white house with green shutters and a picket fence from being anything other than a residence is a small sign directing visitors down the driveway. As you walk along, however, the property transforms from what looks like a modern day home to a seemingly self-sufficient estate, complete with its own milk house, barn and blacksmith shop.

The Museum Complex is a collection of eight buildings and structures maintained by the Bellport-Brookhaven Historical Society. Together, these buildings and the treasures inside them paint an accurate picture of life through the ages in a quaint village by the sea. The basis of the Complex is the Post-Crowell House, deeded to the Society in 1967 by Florence Crowell. Built by Hiram Post, a ship designer, in 1833, the house brings the Crowell family to life, as it contains many of their own possessions. Just past the house is the milk house for the home. Still in its original location, it looks like a miniature house, complete with windows, a door and even a chimney. Everything needed to make butter is on display inside the milk house, including the butter churn, paddles and molds. At the center of the Museum Complex is a magnificent garden, featuring an 1850 gazebo, shaded by a magnificent "candelabra" pine. The 200-year-old tree is a sight to behold, so large that you can almost picture the Crowell children curling up and reading on one of its oversized limbs. The Complex also includes the blacksmith shop of Joseph Shaw and his son Charles. The two used the shop from the late 1800s through the 1920s for their work as farriers, or horseshoe makers, wheelwrights and iron masters. Moved from its original home to the Complex's site, the shop showcases some of the equipment the Shaws used, including cogs and rollers for shaping metal.

The Barn Museum's displays provide a glimpse into four centuries of Bellport living. The barn itself was built in 1904 by Robinson & Watkins for William W. Hulse and was used as a livery stable. It was moved onto the Complex's site in 1968 and was dedicated as a museum in 1972. The first floor is divided into several galleries. One is the Sperry gallery, which displays a copy of the 1914 patent issued to Elmer A. Sperry for his gyroscope. A recreation of the Brookhaven Post Office is an interesting display, as is the end wall on which hang many carpentry, ship building and fishing tools. The first floor is also home to the "Pigskin Book," a 1696 whaling expedition ledger. The book has been appraised as priceless because it contains unique evidence that Native Americans were often sent out on the whaling expeditions that defined the East End.

On the second floor of the museum, an extensive collection of duck hunting decoys is showcased. The collection, which belonged to Captain Wilbur A. Corwin, includes working decoys as well as more decorative versions. The upstairs section of the museum also houses two newer exhibits created in honor of the Grucci family and Ingrid Bergman, the honorees of the Museum's 2003 and 2004 galas respectively. Bergman's daughter Isabella Rossellini, and the Grucci family are longtime Bellport residents.

One of the final stops of the Complex tour is also one of the most rewarding. The Brown Memorial Building features one of the U.S.'s largest collections of toile, or painted tin, second only to the Smithsonian's collection. The compilation includes the standard painted trays, along with teapots, clocks, candle snuffers, and ## review: aida at the gateway playhouse

Presumably to avoid any confusion with Verdi's grand opera of the same name, this event is billed as Elton John and Tim Rice's Aida – as if anyone could ever confuse them!

Aida, for anyone out of the loop, is one of the great tragic love stories, reputedly based on a true story told in ancient Egyptian hieroglyphs. Radames, the all-conquering hero, is betrothed to Amneris, daughter and heir to the ailing Pharaoh. Radames captures a group from the Nubian tribe, which, to this day, still inhabits the southern regions of the Nile. Among them is Aida, who, unknown to Radames, is also the daughter of the King of Nubia, who is also captured in a separate battle. After Aida becomes a servant to Amneris, Radames falls in love with her and betrays his country to allow Aida's father to escape. He is found out by Amneris, who then has Radames and Aida condemned to being buried alive in a tomb. Not a pretty story, but one of great passion and intrigue.

Elton John and Tim Rice follow the story line fairly well with some typical Elton John melodies and lyrics that are often difficult to hear fully due to the stylized singing associated with Elton John's works. This production by Gateway Playhouse is being staged in the Patchogue Theater for the Performing Arts, a theater that is a tribute to the efforts of the Town of Patchogue to bring it back to life.

The stage settings are interestingly and simply done with the use of immense drapes. A literal sandbox on the stage, with a rather noisy revolving section on top, helps to set the scene of desert heat and palaces and also allows the show to move at a steady pace. The costume choices though were puzzling, being a literal mish mash from pseudo Pharaonic to the scene where Radames, played by Nicholas Belton, is dressed as though he is off to a party in the Hamptons. At the end, as he awaits punishment and death he gives some audience members a treat as he exposes his undisputed well toned physique. Not to be outdone, Amneris, played by the beautiful leggy blonde Elizabeth Stanley, ensures all members of the audience can share equality of viewing unclad beauty, as she strips to next-to-nothing twice, before being dressed into her next outlandish costume.

But, back to the show. All of the young principals had very good voices, as you would expect in a Gateway show. My disappointment was not of the voices but rather of how the director has decided to portray the characters of Amneris and Radames in particular. Amneris, as seen by Verdi, was basically a scheming vicious selfish princess who would let nothing stand in her way, but at the end realizes just what she has done to her lover. Here, she came over as a cross between Jean Harlow and Marilyn Monroe, a spoiled vacuous clothes loving blonde, the kind that all those jokes are written about! Even when sentencing the lovers to their doom, you never got the sense that for her this is the heart of the tragedy because she has to punish the person with whom she is still totally in love. Similarly, Radames is the leader of the Egyptian army, a warrior, a man amongst men, but here he comes over as a lightweight, unsure of himself, and you never feel the passion that must have struck him when he fell in love with Aida. The saving grace of the evening was a beautifully thought-out and sustained performance by Idara Victor in the title role. Here truly was a Nubian princess condemned to being a slave. Haughty and humble when needs be but never cowed. Here there was passion, and whenever she was on stage there also was electricity. She also has a great voice. Similarly two other performances stood out. Alexander Cassel played the part of Mereb, the cheeky, young, know-it-all confidant, first of Radames, then of Aida, with great style and stage presence. Darren Matthias as Zoser, Radames' scheming father, determined to see his son as the husband of the next ruler of Egypt, projected evil intent to the nth degree. The choreography was well thought-out and executed and the ensemble worked well together.

The audience loved the show on opening night and there is no doubt that because so many love the music of Elton John, Aida, which runs in Patchogue until July 23rd, will continue to send audiences home happy.

even sewing machines. The Brown Building also houses the Complex's Pelletreau International Doll Collection, which boasts 579 dolls from 67 countries, and a particularly interesting, if a little odd, display of paperweights.

The John Chester Boathouse and the Exchange Shop round out the Complex. In the Boathouse, you can find one of Bellport's earliest scooters, the Jib, along with a catboat built by Gil Smith, one of the finest craftsmen at the turn of the century. The Exchange Shop provides a place for locals to sell their antiques and collectibles, with a part of the proceeds of each sale going to the Complex.

Recently, the Museum Complex has experienced a sort of surge in popularity. The Society's president, Carol Bleser, attributes this new interest to, of all things, air conditioning. "If I were to describe us, we're like Sleeping Beauty. For years no one paid any attention." The increase in interest has also allowed the Complex to acquire a permanent curator, Dolores O'Connor. She has been working to create a new exhibit, entitled "Hidden Treasures," which will feature many artifacts that museum has had tucked away. Particularly interesting to the exhibit will be a group of wedding dresses, all worn and donated by Bellport residents, spanning the last two centuries. The Society will also be showing a Felix Darley painting of the Bellport seaside. "Hidden Treasures" will be the theme of this year's Summer Party, to be held on August 14.

ent. The Gateway Acting School provides the expert training so necessary if a performer is to have any chance of succeeding in this, one of the most demanding and potentially disappointing of all professions. Some of the notable successes have been Siri Howard, who went from the Gateway Acting School in 1993 to Broadway in Sound of Music in 1998. Sarah Drew, another student, was cast in the Cuba Gooding film, Radio. Sometimes events make young performers bypass the school such as last year when Janelle Visconti played Baby Jane in Gypsy and then won a role in this year's hot Broadway show, Chitty Chitty Bang Bang. All this is part of what makes today's Gateway Playhouse a showcase for emerging talent as well as attracting actors who already have major Broadway or London's West End experience.

Another key artistic area is casting, where years of experience come into play as the Gateway team looks to put the right faces in the right places. Gateway is geographically very well based for artists looking to work in high quality shows while keeping close to Broadway auditions. The chance for a lead role at Gateway often outbids an ensemble part in a Broadway show, so the casting team, led by Robin Joy Allan invariably has many applicants and some very difficult choices to make when the casting process comes down to the end.

MainStage 1962 - the current Gateway Playhouse on its opening night in 1962.

Robert Duvall and Ruth Pomeroy in a 1956 Barn Theatre production

Gateway Playhouse took another major step forward in its growth when it agreed to work with the Village of Patchogue in the renovation and management of the Patchogue Theater, which has more than double the capacity of the Bellport venue. Today, Gateway is no longer involved in the management of the Patchogue Theater, but they are contracted to stage two of their biggest shows there each year, plus several other smaller events. Elton John's Aida is currently playing there fresh from its long run on Broadway and later in mid-August audiences will flock to see all being revealed in 'The Full Monty.'

What does the future hold for the Gateway Playhouse? It is undoubtedly very well established with a major core of devoted followers, many of whom, like myself, have held season tickets for many years and rarely go home disappointed. Broadway shows get more and more expensive and travel in and out of the city gets less and less pleasurable. The ability to travel to Bellport, enjoy a meal locally and then attend a show that will be as well performed as those on Broadway, drive home afterwards in a fraction of the time it takes on the Expressway or the LIRR is wonderful.

Possibly the biggest long term problems for all musical theaters are the dearth of really great new shows and the escalating costs of staging musicals. No composers and lyricists have come along to match the likes of Rodgers and Hammerstein, Rodgers and Hart, Lerner and Lowe, or Lloyd Webber and Rice. It also is necessary to attract a younger demographic than currently is the case. In his letter in the current season's programs, Paul Allan, the producer, talks of the difficult balance needed between creative input and business sense and he goes on to pay tribute and dedicate this 2005 season to someone who, over the years, was one of the leaders behind this wonderful venture, his father, Stan Allan, who died this spring. Paul Allan writes, "He always inspired me by his honesty, integrity and strong leadership skills and by treating people with respect he was able to gather everyone's opinions into a strong unifying and effective force." Not a bad business philosophy to carry through the next generations of those who built the Gateway Playhouse.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

I'm a huge fan of fresh herbs and use them all year long. There's never an excuse not to cook with cultivated herbs, now available in every supermarket and specialty greenmarket through the year.

And now I have the luxury of stepping out into my garden to clip them to my heart's content. In early June, I visit my local garden center to select my herbs. My garden runneth over with glossy green leaves of basil, spiky leaves of fresh rosemary, robust, aromatic sage, and equally aromatic thyme, Italian parsley, French tarragon, chives, cilantro and mint.

With bushy batches of basil growing in a large whiskey tub, I recently made a batch of classic Italian pesto and thought I would give a container to a young vegetarian friend. I kind of worry about how some vegetarians eat. When suggesting how to handle the pesto and what foods to use it with – a revelation occurred. Anytime this young lady purchased store-bought pesto she heated it up. Mon dieu! Pesto is never cooked and most often served with pasta – the dewy emerald green sauce is intoxicating with silky fresh fettuccine. A little of the pasta cooking water is added to the pesto before the pasta is drained in order to warm the sauce and to facilitate spreading it more easily. Pesto is perfect stirred into risotto or gnocchi or even with boiled new potatoes just before serving.

While I'm not a fan of cold pasta salads, I must admit they come in handy at this time of the year; one of my favorites is fusilli al pesto. The short dry corkscrew-shaped pasta is perfect for retaining pesto sauce. The entire recipe can be prepared ahead, refrigerated, then brought to room temperature before serving. The dish makes a delectable portable gift to a barbecue or picnic buffet. Ah, summer!

PESTO SAUCE IN THE FOOD PROCESSOR

Prepare sauce and mix with cooked fettuccine, boiled potatoes or gnocchi. The sauce can be prepared ahead and refrigerated or placed in the freezer. If freezing the sauce, do not add the butter and cheese until ready to use it.

Serves 4-5

For the pesto

4-5 cups fresh basil leaves, rinse and gently pat dry
3-4 cloves garlic
1/3 cup pignoli (pine) nuts
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2-2/3 cups extra-virgin olive oil
1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons butter, softened

To use for pasta or gnocchi

1 pound fettuccine, homemade or quality store-bought
2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water

1. Pack basil leaves, without crushing them, into a measuring cup. Set aside.

CHEFS AND CHAMPAGNE AT WÖLFFER ESTATE VINEYARD

The celebrated executive chef Michael Romano of Union Square Café in New York City will be the honored guest at Chefs and Champagne 2005, the annual summer food and wine celebration to benefit the James Beard Foundation on Saturday, July 23rd, at Wölffer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack. The event will take place from 5 – 8 p.m.

Michael Romano, well known for his outstanding contributions to the food industry, co-authored with his partner, Danny Meyer, The Union Square Café cookbook, Harper Collins and Second Helpings From Union Square Café.

At the event, under a tent on the gorgeous sprawling grounds of Wölffer Estate Vineyards, Chefs and Champagne will feature a variety of superb tastings prepared by more than 30 outstanding chefs from New York City, Long Island and out of state. Champagne Charles Heidsieck will be poured, and the Estate's award winning wines will be served by proprietor Christian Wölffer and wine-maker/general manager Roman Roth.

The silent auction, always a highlight at the event, will feature premier travel packages, restaurant dining, cookware, fine wine and assorted specialty food items.

Proceeds of Chefs and Champagne include maintaining the historic James Beard House in Greenwich Village, New York, which serves as a performance space for chefs across the country and distributes scholarships and grants for study to aspiring culinarians.

Admission to the benefit is $150 for members of the James Beard Foundation, and $200 for guests. To obtain reservations, call (212) 627 2308. The James Beard Foundation is a not-for-profit 501 (c) (3) charitable organization dedicated to promoting excellence in the culinary arts.

2. Put the garlic cloves into workbowl of food processor fitted with steel knife or into a blender and process until finely chopped. Add basil leaves, pignoli nuts, salt and pepper and process with several on/off turns or blend until ingredients are just combined. Be careful not to overprocess or mixture will break down. With a rubber spatula scrape mixture down sides of bowl as necessary.

3. Add oil in a thin stream through feed tube of processor or small hole in cover of blender and blend until mixture is smooth. Can be prepared ahead. Refrigerate for up to 3-4 days or freeze in a tightly covered container.

4. When ready to sauce your pasta, potatoes or gnocchi, bring the pesto sauce to room temperature and stir in the cheese and butter.

To cook the pasta: bring 4-5 quarts water to a rolling boil and put in the salt. Put the fettuccine in all at once and stir into the water. If pasta is freshly made it will take about 1 or 2 minutes to cook. If store bought, cook about 8-10 minutes or according to package directions. Just before the pasta is cooked add 2 tablespoons pasta cooking water to the pesto to soften. Drain the pasta in a colander and transfer to a warm platter. Pour over the sauce and toss to mix. Add additional grated cheese, if desired. Serve hot. Or cook packaged gnocchi according to package directions and sauce with pesto.

Note: Always add 2-3 tablespoons of cooking water from the pasta, potatoes or gnocchi and stir into the pesto to lighten the sauce.

FUSILLI AL PESTO

Pesto is the classic puree of fresh basil leaves, garlic and pignoli nuts with olive oil and grated Parmesan cheese. Fusilli, a short, corkscrew-shaped pasta retains the sauce very well and makes a tasty, cold pasta dish for warm weather entertaining.

Serves 10-12 on a buffet.

C is Not for Cabbage

It has recently come to my attention that Sesame Street's Cookie Monster has been renamed the Health Food Monster. "Cookies are a sometimes food," he tells children. That's good news because "sometimes" is about all the time I have to bake homemade chocolate chip cookies. When I say homemade, I am, of course, referring to the recipe on the Nestle Toll House Semi-Sweet Morsels bag. Ruth Wakefield, who owned the Toll House Inn, created Toll House Cookies in the 1930s. Built in 1709, the inn was once a functioning tollhouse on the toll road between Boston and New Bedford, Massachusetts. I grew up in Massachusetts and therefore, when I bake Toll House recipe cookies, I consider them homemade, or at least home-state-made. However, I often use the store-bought, ready-to-bake Pillsbury dough as a quick fix for a sudden cookie craving. Baking a batch of the ready-made dough involves simply spooning dough onto a cookie sheet and baking it, a process that took me 20 minutes less than making a homemade batch. To test the homemade/store-bought taste difference, I used my teenage brother, a chocolate chip cookie connoisseur. Blindfolded, he preferred the homemade cookies. My solution to achieving homemade taste without the time commitment: try the bakeries. The cookies will still be homemade — they will just be made in someone else's home. At the Amagansett Farmer's Market, bakers are "slaving away in there [the kitchen] all day long," says employee Abigail Mitchell. A sizeable cookie costs $1.50, but the chocolate chips are somewhat sparse. Therefore, chocolate lovers might prefer to try their Chocolate-Chocolate-Chip. While my taste buds found the original chocolate chip to be slightly too salty and to taste of a bit too much flour, it did receive the teenage brother seal of approval. He was impressed by the softness and the gooiness of the chips, characteristics which he claims the average store-bought cookie lacks. For those who may have more sophisticated chocolate chip cookie tastes than a fifteen-year-old boy, there are plenty of ways to elevate your cookie's status. My grandmother suggests adding a bit of whisky, while a friend of mine prefers to mix some oats into the dough for a rougher texture. Of course, there is the traditional addition of nuts. Walnuts are the most popular, but almonds can also be used for a change of pace. The Blue Duck Bakery Café in Southampton chooses to add macadamias to some of their chocolate chip cookies. They also occasionally offer a mixed chocolate chip and white chocolate chip cookie. Still, out of the normal array of cookies, "chocolate chip is always a best seller," says Keith Kouris, owner of The Blue Duck. Kouris also does some of the baking, although admittedly not as much as when the bakery opened six years ago. With such delicious options available in various Hamptons bakeries, it is hard for cookies to remain a "sometimes food." I enter their doors, humming the theme song of the blue puppet formally known as Cookie Monster: "C is for cookie, that's good enough for me." For me, C is and always will be for cookie. Not carrot or celery or cauliflower, but old-fashioned, full-of-butter cookies.

3. Add oil in a thin stream through feed tube of processor or small hole in cover of blender and blend until mixture is smooth. Can be prepared ahead. Refrigerate for up to 3-4 days or freeze in a tightly covered container.

4. Meanwhile, bring 4-5 quarts water to a boil and add salt. Put in pasta all at once, stirring to separate. Return immediately to a boil and cook 8-10 minutes, depending on the brand, until al dente. Stir occasionally to keep pasta from sticking. (Just before draining, ladle out 2-3 tablespoons cooking water for the pesto.) Drain under cool running water, then give the colander a good shake or two before spreading the pasta on a clean kitchen towel to absorb excess moisture. Add the cooking water to soften the pesto, then stir in the butter and grated cheese.

5. With a rubber spatula, scrape the pesto over the pasta in the bowl and toss to mix until the pasta is thoroughly coated. Transfer to a serving bowl and serve at room temperature with sprigs of fresh basil for garnish.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1 and 2 up to several days ahead or freeze in a suitable container. Complete steps 3 and 4 for the salad up to one day ahead. Refrigerate, covered and serve at room temperature with garnish.

GROWING UP IN THE HAMPTONS HAS ITS ADVANTAGES.

EVEN THE SOIL OUT HERE IS RICH.

Face it. Lettuce on the East End grows up with all the advantages. Rich soil, sunny days, cool nights. So, of course, we travel to all the local farms to pick you the freshest, crispest red leaf, green leaf, romaine and arugula around. (Instead of trucking it in like some other places.) You're worth it.

(Ice)Pop Goes the Summer

Whether you indulge in them curbside from a bodega in Brooklyn, or from a deck on Dune Road, ice pops are a refreshing way to cool off during a steamy summer after noon. A fun frozen treat for all ages, ice pops can be enjoyed at the tiny age of 2 or wise age of 92.

There are many different varieties of ice pops to choose from, which may be a little overwhelming as we stand gazing into a showcase down the freezer aisle of our local grocer, or staring up at the menu on the side of our neighborhood ice cream truck. About 100 years ago, when the first ice pop was created, it was much more simple.

On a cold winter night in 1905, 11-year-old Frank Epperson combined some soda water powder and water (a popular drink back in those days) and then accidentally left his concoction on back porch overnight, with a single stirring stick in it. The temperature dropped to a record low that night, freezing the delightful drink, and leaving little Frank with a stick of frozen soda water. Eighteen years later, in 1923, Frank Epperson recalled his accidental invention and launched his own business with 7 different flavors of Epsicles. The name of the first frozen treat was then changed to Popsicles.

Today there are over 30 different flavors to choose from, including the most popular and my favorite flavor- orange. Popsicles popularity has remained at an all time high. In 2001, a reported 1.4 billion sticks were used to manufacture Popsicle products- that's more than 9 miles of sticks lined up end to end!

What was once the small simple invention of an 11-year-old boy has now launched into something of monstrous proportions. On the first day of summer (June 21, 2005), Snapple and CoolBrands International attempted to break the Guinness World Record for the "World's Largest Ice Pop." The 20-ton, kiwi strawberry flavored, edible Snapple on Ice Pop stood two-and-a-half stories tall in New York City's Union Square. Made up of more than 302,000 servings of Snapple on Ice, it contained more than 3,950 gallons of the kiwi strawberry. Fortunate attendees of the event between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. were even able to score free Snapple on Ice, and Snapple drinks. The 35,000 pound, 24 ft ice pop didn't quite break the record, but New Yorkers had a cool way of celebrating the launch of summer.

You don't have to wait for the jingle of the ice cream man to get your fix of frozen treats on a stick this summer. Homemade ice pops are fun and easy to create. Here are a few of my favorite ice pop recipes. For children's versions, alcohol should be replaced with extra juice.

Strawberry Margarita Ice Pops

1 1/4 lb strawberries, hulled and halved
1/2 cup white tequila
1/2 cup superfine granulated sugar
1 tablespoon fresh lime juice

Special equipment: 8 (1/3-cup) ice pop molds and 8 wooden sticks

Blend all ingredients in a blender until smooth, then force through a fine sieve into a large glass measuring cup. Pour into molds and add sticks. Freeze at least 24 hours.

Midori Melon Ice Pops

4 cups (1/2-inch pieces) peeled ripe honeydew melon (1 melon)
5 tablespoons Midori (melon liqueur)
3 tablespoons vodka
1 1/2 tablespoons superfine granulated sugar
Special equipment: 6 (1/3-cup) ice pop molds and 6 wooden sticks

Blend all ingredients in a blender until smooth. Pour purée into a sieve lined with a double thickness of cheesecloth set over a bowl and let drain undisturbed for 30 minutes. Discard solids. Pour liquids into molds and freeze at least 24 hours. Add sticks when mixture is slushy, about 1 hour.

Mango Daiquiri Ice Pops

3 cups chopped peeled mangoes (2)
6 tablespoons light rum
1/2 cup superfine granulated sugar
2 tablespoons water
1 1/2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
Special equipment: 8 (1/3-cup) ice pop molds and 8 wooden sticks

Piña Colada Ice Pops

3 cups (1/2-inch cubes) peeled fresh pineapple (1)
1/2 cup well stirred canned cream of coconut
Special equipment: 8 (1/3-cup) ice pop molds and 8 wooden sticks

Blend all ingredients in a blender until smooth, then force through a fine sieve into a large glass measuring cup. Pour liquid into molds and add sticks. Freeze at least 24 hours.

Dining in the Hamptons

Side Dish

By Aji Jones

The 4th of July ushers in the true beginning of summer and with it comes a couple of new restaurants..... Chow in East Hampton, the new sister establishment to Bamboo, has opened its doors for the summer. Unique choices include a special dim sum menu. Madame Tong's in Southampton officially opened over the Holiday weekend. The new Chinese Steakhouse offers diners an exciting new option when it comes to the Southampton restaurant scene. It also features a late night lounge with live music and creative cocktails. Also in Southampton, Nello Summertime has finally opened as a follow-up to the popular Nello on the Upper East side in Manhattan. Moving further west you will find Annona in Westhampton Beach, serving Italian cuisine from the top floor of a Lamborghini and Rolls-Royce dealership.

With summer comes the search for al fresco dining. This season your choices are endless with each hamlet offering its own selection of waterfront and outdoor dining.

If we begin at "the end" you will find a few places to enjoy a little fresh air as you watch the sunset, like The Lakeside, Gosman's and Nick's on the Ocean. Heading up the stretch, who can resist a stop at places like Cyril's for drinks or The Clam Bar for a lobster roll? In East Hampton diners have the choice of people watching on Newtown Lane at Babette's or Citta Nuova or enjoying the waterfronts at East Hampton Point and Bostwick's. Even hot spots like Della Femina, Nick & Toni's and Pacific East all offer outdoor dining on little patios.

Heading further west into Sag Harbor, diners have many choices. If you are in the mood for Italian, give Daniele at 21 Water a shot; for French try JLX Bistro. Sen is great for sushi and if seafood is what you seek The Beacon and B. Smith's are top choices. Now heading back out to Route 27 you will find even more roadside choices. Just outside of East Hampton there is Nichol's, serving up warm Irish hospitality, and located just across the street is JL Bistro who also boasts an outdoor patio. Now if you continue heading west on 27 you will find World Pie to be a popular choice and Bobby Van's, with floor to ceiling doors, offers open air dining.

Heading into Southampton, Robert's in Water Mill offers a hidden retreat for serious diners. Southampton offers a wide range of outdoor dining choices including The Southampton Publick House, newly opened Madame Tong's, The Driver's Seat and Fellingham's. Tide Runners along the Shinnecock Canal is a popular happy hour spot. From Hampton Bays into Westhampton choices include Indian Cove, The Inn Spot on the Bay, Margarita Island, The Patio, Tierra Mar and Docker's Waterside Restaurant.

Turtle Crossing has brought back one of their crowd favorites, BBQ duck. The tasty bird is served with black currant sauce, wilted greens and quinoa for $25. Duck lovers may also purchase the bird solo - a half a duck for $13 or a whole duck for $25. For more information, call Turtle Crossing at 324-7166.

Calling all Foodies! Tickets are on sale for the First Annual Hamptons Wine & Food Festival, which will take place on Friday, August 26th and Saturday, August 27th, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. at The Hayground School in Bridgehampton. This event is sure to be the culinary event of the summer with live cooking demonstrations from star chefs, extensive wine seminars, a themed Grand Tasting each night, book signings, displays of the latest and greatest cooking gadgets and high end appliances. Tickets are $150 per person for each afternoon session, which runs from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and features a food expo, live chef demos and competitions, book signings and numerous wine and food seminars. The evening session offers a Grand Tasting: "Great Wines from Around the World" from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. for $150 per person each evening. A Platinum Pass for the weekend, which includes all four segments and a VIP after-party on Saturday night, is also available for $650 per person or $600 if purchased before July 30th. Tickets may be purchased by calling 537-5937 or online at www.ticketweb.com. # Dining in the Hamptons

My Thai

Why is it that cuisines from cultures closer to the equator tend to have more spice? I've heard many theories in response to this question, one of the most plausible being that spicy food makes you sweat, and therefore it helps to cool down the body temperature. But regardless of the reason behind it, as you get closer to the equator, your dinner will heat up with your body. So check out the nearest globe and you'll learn how to spice up your life. Thailand lingers just north of the equator, and the piquant dishes from this country will awaken the senses. However, for those of us with what the Thai would call "farang tongues" (aka western taste buds), we can always modify the quantity of chili peppers that get crushed up into the curry.

The national dish of Thailand, served on every street corner for about 40 cents a plate, is Pad Thai. Wrinkled men and women in wide triangle hats scoop noodles from giant woks and serve up this steaming dish that bursts with sweetness, sourness, and spice at once. It seems a little intimidating at first, because there are so many ingredients, but it's actually relatively simple to concoct. You've just got to be fast on your feet, as it all cooks very quickly. You may also use prepared Pad Thai sauce to cut out some preparation time.

PAD THAI (www.globalgourmet.com)

Ingredients

1/4 cup tamarind paste
1/4 cup warm water
1 package Pad Thai Noodles
4 oz skinless, boneless chicken breast OR 4 oz fried tofu OR 8 large shrimps
6 tbsp roasted unsalted peanuts

2 tbsp lime juice
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 tsp chopped garlic
2 eggs
1 cup bean sprouts
2 stems green onion, cut into 1-inch pieces
1/2 tsp roasted chilies

Fresh coriander leaves
Wedges of lime

1. Soak noodles in cold water for at least 1 hour.
2. Combine tamarind paste with a 1/4 cup warm water in a small bowl and let soak for at least 15 minutes.

3. Slice chicken into 1/4-inch strips or slice the fried tofu into 3/4-inch cubes.

5. Blend or crush peanuts into coarse meal.

6. OR USE PREPARED SAUCE. Return to your reserved tamarind paste. Mash it and transfer the mud-like mixture to a strainer set into a bowl. Mash and push with a spoon, forcing liquid to strain into the bowl. Scrape off the juice that clings to the underside of the strainer. You will have about 5 tbsp of tamarind juice.

Add to it the fish sauce, sugar and lime juice. Beat to thoroughly mix and reserve. Discard the solids left in the strainer.

7. Heat oil in a wok. Add garlic and stir, letting it cook for about 30 seconds. Add chicken, tofu or shrimp and stir-fry for 1 minute. Break eggs into wok and let them fry without breaking them up for 1-2 minutes.

8. While eggs cook, quickly drain the noodles and then add to wok, giving them a quick fold, stir-frying for 1 minute from the bottom up. Add reserved tamarind juice, etc. (from step #6) and continue stir-frying, mixing everything together for 1-2 minutes. Your noodles will be about half their original volume.

9. Add about 2/3 of the reserved ground peanuts and stir. Add about 2/3 of the bean sprouts and all the green onion pieces. Stir-fry for 30 seconds and take off heat.

10. Transfer noodles to a serving dish and sprinkle with roasted chilies. Top with the rest of the ground peanuts, the rest of the sprouts, some strips of red pepper and fresh coriander leaves. Stick a couple of lime wedges on the side and serve immediately.

But on the streets of Bangkok, my favorite dish was a little bit fancier. At about 80 cents a dish, and served over a scoop of white rice, Green Curry with chicken or tofu can be so spicy it makes your tongue burn. But when it's taken down to "farang" level, I find it to be pretty much the most delectable meal in the world.

THAI GREEN CHICKEN CURRY (www.cooks.com)

green beans

Green Curry Paste:

3 small fresh green chilies, chopped

1/4 cup chopped fresh lemongrass

1/4 cup chopped fresh coriander

2 tbsp water

1 tsp shrimp paste

1/4 tsp ground turmeric

1. Put all ingredients for green curry paste into blender until smooth, or if you don't have a blender, use a mortar and pestle.

2. Cut chicken into thin strips. Chop the beans into lengthy strips. Cook the green curry paste in wok, stirring for about 3 minutes.

3. Add chicken/tofu and beans to the pan and cook, stirring for about 5 minutes. Add the coconut cream, stir in and simmer uncovered for 3 to 5 minutes or until dish slightly thickens.

4. Serve with white rice and enjoy!

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Hollywood producers can be seen of late as archaeologists carrying pick axes and wearing pith helmets, aglow with flickering candles exploring the dark, musty attics of showbiz history in order to pick another relic of the bygone days that can be "remade." New again is the thing of the moment and anything new is too risky and therefore becoming rare. Ah, ha! Eureka! Can you imagine, they've unearthed the 1960s television sitcom, Bewitched, of all unearthly things, to dust off and pass on as a contempo feature. Contempo? Bizarro, I say, at the least.

As a start: Stretched to 90 minutes, the movie barely holds up past the sitcom's 30 minutes (including commercials). Its final half-hour is held up in its finicky grasping last stretch by a peppy supporting performance or two, otherwise, the entire film is carried by a breathless interpretation by Nicole Kidman as an unworldly witch coping with Los Angeles life with the help of her magical twitching nose. Her breathlessness refers to the half-whisper Marilyn Monroe tone she uses to match Kidman's highly polished, unreal look. Perfect for someone from another wherever.

For you bushel basketcases who may not have seen reruns of the TV Bewitched, the nose-assisted magical powers were used by Samantha to keep her very mortal husband in good standing as the head of their trim suburbanite home. You must bear in mind that the same year, 1964, saw civil rights laws enacted that forbade sex discrimination in the workplace. However, Samantha's place was in the house so, it didn't count. Housewives made darn sure that a harsh scouring powder did not scratch the Formica. The wily witch was wonderfully played by Elizabeth Montgomery, daughter of the politically slanted, '30s and '40s film star, Robert Montgomery, resident of the Maidstone Pink Summer Cottage years-gone-by. Today is today and there are changes.

Nicole Kidman

Will Ferrell

As directed by Nora Ephron and co-scripted with her sister Delia (also carrying on family tradition; their Dad and Mom were scriptwriters) the story's conceit takes on some changes – both very clever and very cause-revoking. Ms. Nicole is Isabel Bigelow, a reformed witch attempting to be normal. To do so, she's gotten a 1960s charming house as trimmed as Samantha's and has even included a cat. She is at peace until one day (bool) while browsing in a bookstore, her pert proboscis is noticed by a slipping actor, Jack Wyatt done by Will Ferrell, who has been forced to (ready for a coincidence?) take a television role as the husband of a witch in a TV remake of Bewitched. Now, that is some other kind of witchery. When Jack meets Isabel, a light bulb goes on over Jack's dim wits. If his TV wife (the witch) is played by an amateur, he'd appear better. Wouldn't it figure that Isabel with her innate inner and outer qualifications tests better for her role than he does? And, of course, the same goes in Ms. Ephron's movie. Mr. Ferrell has some moments but, Nicole's swift broom sweeps the floor with him. Other moments are had by Michael Caine as Isabel's papa. Jason Schwartzman is Jack's awful agent and, Steve Carell doing Paul Lynde perks up the final grinding down finale –finally. Maybe a laugh track might have helped.

Bewitched

The screenwriter Ephron, best known for her script When Harry Met Sally, has been caught "faking it" with Bewitched. For all of the 1960s air-headedness of the TV series, it had a magic of its own, a genuine sincerity of purpose. Naïve, but more real than just a clever twist or a twitch.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Dave Evans' MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

CHARLIE AND THE CHOCOLATE FACTORY

In the wake of the Michael Jackson trial it seems strange to reconsider Roald Dahl's tale of an eccentric millionaire who invites little children to his marvellous abode. In keeping with the newfound creepiness, who better to helm this than Tim Burton. Johnny Depp plays Willy Wonka with the same delightful and unexpected comic verve of his recent turn in Pirates of the Caribbean.

THE FANTASTIC FOUR

Like clockwork another comic-book movie arrives to outrage the 'original' fans but thrill the children. For those in somewhat less arrested development, characters such as The Thing and Doctor Victor Von Doom may grate but if you're in the mood for a more light-hearted action film than Batman Begins, this might fill the void.

WAR OF THE WORLDS

Spielberg is a master of spectacle and Tom Cruise is pretty comfortable with aliens but what of poor little Dakota Fanning? What H.G. Wells wrote and Orson Welles read so eerily on the radio here becomes summer blockbuster fare. Words are out as is subtlety but expect big bangs and gung-ho patriotism galore.

BEWITCHED

Remake fever is alas not over just yet and Nicole Kidman seems not to have learnt her lesson after last year's disastrous Stepford Wives. That said this boasts a solid supporting cast of Michael Caine,

Will Ferrell and Shirley Maclaine along with an Ephron sisters script. Not to mention the quirky meta-plot, which sees a real witch, cast in a television remake of the original series.

MARCH OF THE PENGUINS

This documentary by French scientist-turned-director Luc Jacquet has been an unlikely success story in the film industry's much hyped summer slump. In the US version, Morgan Freeman narrates the tale of emperor penguins as they make their way to the breeding ground, make some babies and tend for them.

WEDDING CRASHERS

Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn star here as two guys who sneak into wedding parties to pick-up women. Of course their zany bachelor ways come undone when Wilson's character falls for one of his prey thus ruining the game and forcing the men to grow up. Nothing out of the ordinary here though it is nice to see that this doesn't have Ben Stiller in it.

DARK WATER

From the pen of Koji Suzuki, the author of The Ring, the latest American adaptation of a Japanese horror movie follows a recently divorced mother and child as they discover their new home is haunted. Boasting perhaps the least thrilling title since Heavy Rain, the film instead relies on its extremely talented supporting cast, which includes Tim Roth, Dougray Scott and the great Pete Postlethwaite.

Polo for All

I shudder as I write this article, thinking I may be making public one of the relatively best-kept secrets in the Hamptons – sacrificing the sanctuary of peace and tranquility for a buck. But I've also come to realize it's selfish to keep such a place to myself. Everyone knows the big to-do that is the Mercedes Benz Classic at the Bridgehampton Polo Club – a world where Manolo Blahniks meet horse manure and some of the best polo players in the world compete for the coveted title of champion – but there is another club just up the street that is an ideal place to watch polo without the pretence, without the VIP section and definitely without the VVIP section. There are no bars, no Veuve Clicquot, no Grey Goose. There are only the occasional captain's chairs, blankets, packed picnic baskets, and a love for low and medium-goal polo. The best part about it is that it lasts all summer and it's free.

Located on Millstone Road, the Southampton Polo Club is absolutely breathtaking. The grounds are lush and expansive. The thunder of eight horses galloping, riders poised in their stirrups, with mallets cocked is, to say the least, intense. But it's also somehow one of the most relaxing experiences you can have. There's such grace and elegance in the sport. The horses are stunning; bred to dance the high-speed waltz that is the sport of kings.

I was a bit hesitant last year when I first visited the grounds to catch a game. I had wanted to take photographs, but not being a member, I wasn't sure how exclusive the club was and whether it allowed outsiders to attend matches. That's when I met Chris Weir, who invited me to grab a chair and follow him. I sat for a bit snapping shots from the sideline as the ball whizzed by, but then took off for a walk around the pitch and got shots from all possible angles. I was hooked, and every Friday, I made a point of heading down and catching the afternoon game and, occasionally, one of the Saturday or Sunday games as well.

The club was founded in 1989 based on a true love of the sport. Frank MacNamara, Laura Newcomb, Randy Aversano, and Larry Graed were all relative newcomers to the game, but as full-time and seasonal residents of the South Fork, they acknowledged the need for a venue to play polo and decided to band together and form the club. They looked to create a place that would foster the growth of polo through amateur (intermediate and novice) play, lessons, and the raising of polo ponies.

Sixteen years later, the club now boasts stables suitable to board 120 horses, The Atlantic (a second polo arena by the Atlantic Golf Course), 50 members, and club play and tournaments five months a year beginning in May. Their structured tutorial program is led by international professionals and has educated riders from fifteen to seventy years of age. It provides everything needed for a newcomer, including tack and a pony (which they breed and train on the grounds).

The club has also become an important and active contributor to the community. It holds benefit matches for several organizations including Hampton Wildlife Rescue, Southampton Shelter, and the Kent Animal Shelter, for whom they raised over $6000 during one game. And of course, visitors are always welcome.

The season schedule is as follows. Please visit the Southampton Polo website for exact start times for chukkers and to check for rain cancellations (of which this season there have been a few).

Skate or Die

Whether you're an adrenaline junkie or extreme sport enthusiast, Lola Couture's "Skate or Die" Competition at Red Creek Park in Hampton Bays is sure to provide an afternoon of entertainment and action. Die-hard skaters and amateurs alike will have the opportunity to compete in four different divisions: 10 and under, 11 to 13, 14 and over, and a masters division.

Although the grand prize for the best overall skater has yet to be announced, I received some insider speculations from one of the team riders. Ian Viola, a 22-year-old Southampton native who rides for Team Lola, said, "I've heard it's going to be a flat screen, but there's also rumors floating around that they're going to give away a bag of cash or one of everyone is healthily hydrated. Flying Point Surf is also hooking up winners with gift certificates, and the Team Lola surfer Trip Patterson has Oakley's Sunglasses supplying sunglasses as well.

In addition to all the skating, Lola Couture is raffling off a paid dinner date with one of their models at the upscale Sag Harbor sushi restaurant Sen. Should the person who picks that lucky ticket be a guy, he'll have the opportunity to wine and dine Amanda Shine on her brother Emmett's dollar. If the winner is a female, she will be escorted by Spencer Koral, a model under Focus Management who has appeared in everything from Sony to Ralph Lauren advertisements. Raffle tickets cost five dollars and all proceeds will go to the Lola Foundation.

The Lola Foundation is a program focused on helping misled underachieving youths. James described his efforts as "an invaluable experience. We're still taking baby steps, but it's my dream to set up a scholarship for Southampton High School students who were overlooked by the educational system just because they were more interested in artistic avenues than scholastics."

Everything kicks off at 4 p.m. on Saturday, July 16th in Red Creek Park, Hampton Bays, and an after party will be held at the Star Room in Wainscott. Please visit www.lolaskateboards.com or pick up a flier at your local surf shop for more information.

Team Lola is a group of riders hailing from both New York City and the Hamptons that Lola Couture sponsors to represent their clothing and skateboard decks. The founding members of Lola Couture went to Southampton High School together, and frequented Lola Prentice Skate Park on Windmill Lane until it was closed in 1998. Lola Couture illustrates their effort to bridge the style gap between trendy and skater. Emmett Shine is the creative force behind Lola's innovative designs, and classifies the new line of sweaters and t-shirts as being "Socialite Skater."

James Cruickshank, the company's spokesman told me, "We have a limo bringing some of the most talented riders in the city from Tompkins Square Park, Harlem and the Lower East Side to rip it up Lola Style. Watch out for Max Price, Ray Goods and the Viola brothers. The tricks they pull off are mind-blowing!"

DJ Vibe will be holding down the turntables, and establishments everywhere from surf shops to nightclubs are passing out promotional fliers in support of the event. The list of sponsors giving out prizes and free stuff is impressive. Jeff Goldstein of Blue & Cream will be providing a limited edition pair of Nike S.B. Zoom Paul Rodriguez sneakers. Lola Couture and Roc-A-Wear Apparel are giving clothes to select winners, and Red Bull will keep the crowd pumped up while Vitamin Water makes sure

Your Life in the Palm of Your Hand

One of the most interesting things to talk about is the future. Most people speculate about the future, taking educated guesses. Others, however, have a gift and are dubbed fortune tellers, psychics, and palm readers. There is some controversy as to whether or not people actually have the ability to predict the future. After all, how can someone tell you the future based on a couple of lines in your hand or on what their crystal balls tell them will happen? Aren't there too many variables happening in the present that make this impossible? Well, one would think so, but if you ever get the chance to talk to a psychic, you will be surprised at what they have to say.

Surprisingly enough, reading a person's palm is a skill that can be taught. There are basically three things that you absolutely have to know when reading a palm. In order to understand this, take a look at your left hand and notice the lines that run across it. You will see three main lines that run in your hand that form the shape of an "m." No, this does not mean that you are a mutant, this means that you are just like everybody else that has hands.

The three lines on your hand, according to palm readers, represent three different aspects of your life. The line that is closest to your thumb represents your life line. The line that is in the middle is called your head line, and the line that is closest to your pinky finger is known as your heart line. Your life line indicates how long you are going to live and how healthy you will be. Obviously, this is the most important line that is on a person's hand. A long and deep life line indicates a long and healthful life. A life line that is marked with a star somewhere on it indicates that you will go through a crisis. A line that is broken indicates a sudden change in lifestyle, accident or illness. A short line does not necessarily mean a short life. However, if it is straight and short, it means that you are very cautious and limit exploration in your life.

Your head line is next. The head line lets you know how logical a person you are: whether you are a dreamer, a realist, or just plain bananas. If you take a look at your head line (the one in the middle) and you notice that it is connected to your life line, then you are someone who thinks about your body a lot. It also means that you are very cautious and you put your body first before doing something. A deep long line through the center of your hand represents a logical way of thinking, and a short line indicates a short attention span and lack of deep thinking. Double head lines indicate extremely strong mental abilities.

The most interesting line, of course, is the love line or the heart line. If the line runs straight towards your index finger, this indicates that you have a very normal and healthy outlook on love. If it goes towards your middle finger, you have a very materialistic and selfish outlook on love. If your love line breaks off into three lines, it indicates three different relationships that you will have.

There is much more to talk about, but it would take an entire newspaper to tell you all about palm reading. It is very interesting, however, if you can find the time to do a little research. I recommend the website www.ofesite.com.

There are three psychics in the area who are also incredibly interesting characters and you may want to pick up a copy of their books. There is a psychic couple in East Hampton, Monte Farber and Amy Zerner, and they have sold millions of books on the subject. They also sell tarot reading cards and many other psychic products. Their books have been translated into nine different languages and companies hire them to help them learn whether or not their corporate strategy will work for them. They are also very nice people. If you are interested in the subject, their website is amazing and you should visit it to learn more at www.theenchantedworld.com.

The other psychic that hails from East Hampton is Donna McCue. She hosts events, gives private readings, workshops and corporate readings as well. If you would like to schedule a time to see her, you can set up an appointment on her website, www.donnamccue.com.

Take Five 2005 with Jan Silver

Another summer week crammed with good entertainment and special events. Bay Street Theatre opens its production of the mystery thriller Sleuth in Sag Harbor and comedienne Susie Essman is there next Monday. Guild Hall has the hit show Lypsinka: The Boxed Set on Friday and Saturday, then a concert staging of G.B. Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell" with Edward Asner, Paul Hecht, Dianne Wiest and Harris Yulin on Sunday evening. Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's Michael McDonald concert tonight is sold out but there are still some tickets to popular recording artists' Gary Puckett and Gary Lewis program on Saturday.

Music Festival of the Hamptons is in the midst of its 24-concert series with Perlman Music Program artists, children's concert and New York Philharmonic soloists this weekend. Scope Art Fair, which spotlights contemporary visual, performing and fine arts, is in Southampton. Author James Salter reads from his new book in Bridgehampton today, and author Frederic Tuten speaks with artist Ross Bleckner in Southampton on Saturday. Bridgehampton Polo begins its summer season at the fields off Hayground Rd. at 4 p.m. Saturday. Opera of the Hamptons performs Carmen on Saturday evening at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall.

There are many worthwhile benefits this weekend. Our local NPR radio station, WLIU-FM, has a "Jazz Legends" performance and dinner dance tonight at Southampton College. The Sag Harbor Whaling Museum has the real Gidget and then a luau tonight. East Hampton Historical Society has a 19th century historical recreation day including a wedding on Saturday. East End Hospice holds a Tennis & Golf Open all day Saturday in Quogue and Manorville, and "The Orchid Ball" dinner dance for the Child Development Center of the Hamptons is Saturday in Water Mill. James Lipton is master of ceremonies for the Saturday evening barbecue and Grucci fireworks to benefit Boys and Girls Harbor, East Hampton. Read on for details on everything above.

THEATER AND COMEDY

Anthony Shaffer's classic whodunit, Sleuth, which won a Tony Award for best play, opens at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, this weekend. The production stars Tony Roberts and Derek Cecil. Showtimes are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 7 p.m. The cast stays for an audience "talkback" next Tuesday, and there is a 2 p.m. matinee next Wednesday (tickets $40-65). Next Monday at 8 p.m., comedienne and actress Susie Essman is onstage in Bay Street's "Comedy Club" series ($38). Call the box office for tickets at 631-725-9500 or go online to baystreet.org.

East Hampton's John Drew Theater has John Epperson as Lypsinka performing "her" boxed set of females including Joan Crawford, Phyllis Diller and Bette Davis on Friday at 8 p.m. and Saturday at 7 p.m. On Saturday at 10 p.m., Epperson takes off his wigs and makeup to reveal himself in "Show Trash." On Sunday, Pazer Productions and Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton present the third act of George Bernard Shaw's Man and Superman, "Don Juan in Hell." Edward Asner, Paul Hecht, Dianne Wiest and Harris Yulin star in this sharp debate between man, woman, a libertine and the Devil. There is a talkback and then dessert following the performance. Lypsinka tickets are $40-45 and "Don Juan" tickets are $23-25 at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050).

MUSIC

Music Festival of the Hamptons has "An Evening of Gershwin" tonight with Kitty Carlisle Hart, Eric Himy, Jeffrey Biegel and other guest artists. Saturday at 11 a.m., Tiffany Rising Stars pianist Drew Peterson, 11, and violinist Ariel Mitnick, 13, will give a concert. Saturday evening, Itzhak Perlman and Perlman Music Program students give a benefit concert (8 p.m.) after a cocktail/buffet dinner (6:30 p.m.). Sunday at 11 a.m., Peter and the Wolf with the Hampton Chamber Orchestra and Southampton Ballet Company, narrated by Dan Rattiner, goes on under the Festival tent at Bridgehampton's Morriss Center School. Sunday at 3:30 p.m., New York Philharmonic soloists play, and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. the Choral Society of the Hamptons sings, accompanied by the Hampton Chamber Orchestra. There are concerts every evening next week at Wolffer Estate Vineyards, Sagaponack. The schedule is online at www.musicfestivalofthehamptons.com or call 1-800-644-4418 for tickets ($15-$250 with no charge for children and seniors at specified programs).

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has a sold-out benefit concert with Michael McDonald tonight at 8:30 p.m. Recording artists Gary Puckett (sans The Union Gap) and Gary Lewis with The Playboys will take a trip down Memory Lane and reprise their many hit songs of the 1960s-70s. Tickets ($55-80) are available by calling the box office after noon at 631-288-1500.

Opera of the Hamptons presents Bizet's Carmen at the beautifully restored Vail-Leavitt Music Hall, Riverhead, on Saturday at 7 p.m. Bizet's melodies are so well-known, starting with flirty Carmen singing the "Habanera." The cast features young, international opera stars. Tickets are $45 or $55 (priority seating) in advance or $55 at the door and may be ordered by calling 631-728-8804 (www.operaofthehamptons.org).

SPEAKERS (no charge unless noted)

Novelist James Salter is the Bridgehampton library's "Fridays at Five" reader today with his new short-story collection Last Night; $15 admission includes refreshments (rainsite, Bridgehampton School). Guild Hall's curator Christina Mossaides Strassfield will talk about the current "East End Ten" show at 9 a.m. Saturday, part of the Artists Alliance of East Hampton's weekend tour ($50 includes the tour & talk). Novelist/essayist/reviewer Frederic Tuten will talk about the creative life with painter Ross Bleckner at the Parrish Art Museum, Southampton, on Sat. at 6 p.m. ($10 members, $20 guests).

James Frey will talk about his book My Friend Leonard upstairs at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. At Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, literary critic Morris Dickstein will read from his new book The Mirror in the Roadway: Literature and the Real World at 6 p.m. This is the 10th year of the Poetry Marathon reading series at Amagansett's Marine Museum. Poets Myra Shapiro and Ann McGovern will read at 4 p.m. Sunday. On Monday, 7 p.m. at Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library, beach expert Dr. Stephen Leatherman will talk about hurricanes.

FILMS

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's feature July 18-20 is The Holy Girl (Spanish/English) about a 16-year-old discovering God and lust. Guild Hall's Parisian film series continues this Tuesday, 7:30 p.m., with Arnaud Desplechin's much-talked about tale of two ex-lovers, Kings and Queen. Admission is $10 for Guild Hall members, $12 for guests, and a brief discussion follows the screening.

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

"scopeART Fair" is a three-day event to introduce and demystify contemporary art, opening noon today at Hampton Hall, Elm Street, Southampton. More than two dozen galleries are exhibiting performance and film/video art as well as paintings and sculpture. There is a silent auction with proceeds benefiting The Retreat and emerging artists grants, a V.I.P. reception from 6 to 9 p.m. tonight benefiting three local arts organizations (tickets $150, $250 for 2, $75 for under-35s) and a "Culture on the Verge" opening party after 9 p.m. with music, special performances and video screenings ($20 admission).

Our local NPR radio station, WLIU-FM, has a benefit dance/buffet tonight with jazz vocalist Tom Lellis entertaining and an auction of luxe items and vacations. Popular DJs Bonnie Grice and Ed Germain are co-hosts, and famed trumpeter/author Dick Sudhalter receives a Jazz Legends Lifetime Achievement Award. Site is a big tent on the great lawn of Southampton College; admission is a $200 donation (tickets online at www.wliu.org or call 631-591-7020).

The Sag Harbor Whaling Museum has a gala luau tonight to complement its current "Island Kings, Whalers and Beach Boys" exhibit. The party starts at 5:30 when the real Gidget, Kathy Kohner, will sign her book, and continues at 6:30 with tropical drinks, music and dancing. Admission is a $50 donation to the Museum, and partygoers are asked to wear resort or Hawaiian dress.

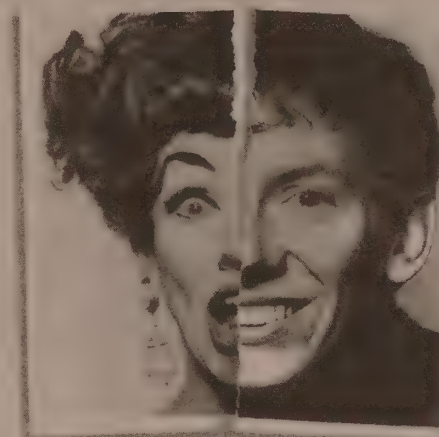

The East End Open is an all-day golf outing and tennis event Saturday benefiting East End Hospice. Golf is at the Rock Hill Golf & Country Club, Manorville, and tennis competition is at Sportime of the Hamptons, Quogue. The day includes continental breakfast, lunch, and an awards cocktail/dinner party with music. For ticket information, call 631-288-7080.

The East Hampton Historical Society is staging a "Wedding of the 19th Century" at Mulford Farm, off Montauk Highway, Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. There will be early American music, crafts, food, dancing, animals and a magic show. There is no admission charge.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

Back When I Was a Kid, Movies Were . . .

A long time ago, when Woody Allen wrote books, he entitled one Those of You With or Without Children, You'll Understand. The title is brought to mind every time I open the entertainment section or sit through a movie preview. So many of the big summer movies are prequels, sequels, remakes or takeoffs of books, television shows or movies many of us knew as children. How delightful for us adults to see these new movies, just for the fun of reclaiming that childhood spirit. And how fun for parents to take their kids to see the very stories with which we grew up.

It starts, of course, with Star Wars. While the Star Wars epic has been enjoyed by people of all ages since the 1970s – first over a several year period then and later over a several year period in recent time – anyone who was a kid when the original movie came out was transported to that galaxy far, far away in a unique and exciting way that has rarely been repeated for that generation, my generation. The cycle comes to an end this year with the final (that is, the third of six) installment, Revenge of the Sith.

This same generation grew up with the first movie version of the great book by Roald Dahl, Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, and of course many generations have enjoyed the book. Now, director Tim Burton and his favorite actor Johnny Depp have teamed up again to bring their own telling of the classic story. Having seen the original movie as a kid, read the book as a kid and then read the book again when my cousins were kids, I can't wait to return to that great factory and visit with the Oompa Loompas.

Another remake of a classic children's movie stars Herbie, that Volkswagen Beetle, and teen fave Lindsay Lohan. While I am not entirely certain that many adults without kids will feel the urge to relive their childhoods by rushing to see Herbie in the same way they will rush to see Willy Wonka, the little car no doubt will enchant a whole new generation of kids and bring about a sense of nostalgia for their parents.

Children today are not the only ones who can experience the H. G. Wells classic War of the Worlds on the big screen for the first time. While many people in the Star Wars generation heard parts of the radio show and were even shown the original movie in school, it is another generation entirely who get to recall a moment from their childhood, when many believed that they were under actual invasion as they listened to the radio, when they see Steven Spielberg's movie version of the book.

On the other hand, people of almost any age enjoyed one version or another of Batman during their childhoods. Some generations had the original comic book. Mine had the campy television show, not to mention various cartoons featuring the caped crusader. And more recent generations have had the parade of Batman movies. So we can all reclaim our childhoods together by going to see the latest installment of the Batman saga, Batman Begins.

Likewise, millions of people who were born anytime during the last fifty years remember the television show "Bewitched" from their childhood, thanks to the miracle of syndication. So, the first-ever movie version allows adults of so many ages to remember those halcyon days. I want to see the movie if for no other reason than to see Shirley McLaine play the role of Endora.

And lest you think that no movie is based on a book that hasn't already been made into a movie, earlier this year the movie The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy came out, reminding many of us of one of the first book series we had read.

With all these blasts from the past, this summer movie season could almost be called Back to the Future. Well, as long as they don't come out with Back to the Future 4 this year.

Out of The Question: "Profit or Passion: The Values of Art"

Why do people acquire art? For some, the decision is a gut response to a painting, sculpture or photograph. For others it's an investment choice, driven by market assessment and appraisal values. Museums, meanwhile, buy art to protect, preserve and interpret works of specific provenance for future generations.

How art moves from the hands of its creators into the market is the topic of next Thursday's "Out Of The Question" at Guild Hall. The title: "Profit or Passion: The Values of Art."

Panelists scheduled for the July 21 program include Jane Wilson, the landscape painter; John Jonas Gruen, the photographer and author; Vered, the gallery owner; Kimberly Goff, the gallery owner; and Jerome Stern, the collector.

The program, second in the Thursday night series, replaces the panel on public art that was cancelled due to schedule conflicts.

Money is often an emotional subject for artists, some of whom never learn how to discuss it with collectors, says Mr. Strugatch, moderator of the discussion. "Quite a few artists feel that talking about money at all is somehow in bad taste. They want to separate the creative process from the sale process. Many feel that money taints the creative process."

He added, "Of course, art is a multi-billion dollar industry. Obviously some people are able to discuss the topic."

The evening's panelists are an impressive group.

Jane Wilson is an accomplished figure from the legendary post-war generation of East End artists. Honored by the American Academy of Arts and Letters, she is also a member of Guild Hall's Academy of the Arts. Her works are found in the permanent collection of Guild Hall, the Parrish Art Museum, and other major museums and galleries. Painting primarily in oils and watercolors, she frequently takes inspiration from the South Fork shoreline.

John Jonas Gruen, born in Paris the son of a British journalist, is known as a journalist, author and photographer. He apprenticed in the mid-1950s with the Rapho-Guillumette photo agency, meeting and working with Brassai, Robert Doisneau, Bill Brandt, Sabine Weiss and Man Ray. He also established himself as a cultural journalist, first for the New York Herald Tribune and later the New York Times. In the ensuing years Mr. Gruen has covered the arts for Vogue, New York Magazine, Art News Magazine, Architectural Digest and Dance Magazine. He is also the author of fourteen books, including biographies of Leonard Bernstein and Keith Haring. He is currently featured in two photo exhibitions on the East End, at the Hamptons Road Gallery and the Stephen Haller Gallery. In 2003 his most recent book of photographs, "Young in the Hamptons," was published.

Jerome Stern, a venture capitalist and manufacturer, began collecting art in the 1950s focusing on works of surrealism and then works by such past European artists as Edvard Munch and Egon Schiele. Today he and his wife Ellen collect contemporary art and photography including works by Joseph Beuys, John Copans, Armish Kapoor and Cindy Sherman. In 2000 the couple opened a 7500 square foot "art barn" adjacent to their Quogue home to display their collection. The Art Barn is open to the public by appointment.

Vered, an Israeli native who goes by one name, sells such artists as Picasso, de Kooning and Chagall from her self-named gallery in East Hampton. The gallery regularly exhibits works by such leading artists as Milton Avery, Willem de Kooning and Marc Chagall. Vered describes herself as a former paratrooper in the Israeli Armed Forces who opened her gallery in 1974.

Kimberly Goff owns and operates the Elaine Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton, co-founded by her late mother in 1965. The gallery has a unique place in the evolution of the Hamptons as a post-war center of painting, and as a child Ms. Goff met such artists as Larry Rivers, Bill King, Lee Krasner, Elaine and Willem de Kooning, Jimmy Ernst, Herman Cherry, Alfonso Ossorio and Milton Glaser. Ms Goff maintains her own career as an artist, specializing in multi-media works.

General admission tickets $12/$10 GH members. Available at the Box Office (631 324 4050) or online at www.guildhall.org or theatremania.com. Guild Hall is at 158 Main Street, E. Hampton, NY. 11937

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

SUNDAYS IN SOHO: STREET ART GALORE

Sidewalk art in New York has always been a world apart from the Hamptons' gallery scene, for obvious reasons. Selling on the street has always been popular, but is it too extreme to imagine such a venue here where there's a scarcity of traditional gallery space? It's a fascinating idea, but of course, it will probably never come to pass.

Weekends in SoHo suggest the advantages of sidewalk art, nonetheless, especially on West Broadway between Prince and Houston Streets. What's ironic, perhaps, is that such displays are near conventional, respected galleries, one of which is owned by Louis Meisel, a long-time Hampton resident.

We found the works sold on the street generally of good quality, and particularly inviting when we could imagine them framed and hanging in a prestigious indoor space; we all know that context often determines artistic merit.

Diversity was evident this past July 4 weekend when it came to subject matter and materials. Asian artist James (no last name given) employed oils for his Manhattan cityscapes and local SoHo restaurants.

Yin-Sheng Sun, a member of the China Woodcutter Association, had watercolors on display; scenes of Central Park were particularly well-executed as were his rows of trees.

Jaime Qi offered examples of mostly female figures, and grotesque as they were, they were still arresting. We even found an artist who had spent time in the Hamptons painting local landscapes, but who was now doing collages, mixing portraits of the Beatles with abstract mages.

Then there was what we might call an installation, a concrete and steel sculpture mounted on top of a parked truck. The figures, duplicating a group of steel workers from a 1932 photograph, had been created by Sergio Furnarn after 9/11. In fact, the piece had been at Ground Zero for eight months, but somehow had ended up in SoHo.

Three objects added to the work made it memorable. One was a fresh rose held by one of the steel workers. Two flags, one Italian and the other American, had also been placed on top of the truck. While their tattered appearance showed wear-and-tear, we wondered if perhaps such wear also symbolized America's fragility after the Twin Towers' attack.

Along with the sidewalk art displays were antique and fine arts shops on the same street. We couldn't resist the "Rugs to Riches" store, an establishment that sold Persian rugs and Venetian glass. Where else could you buy hand-blown flowers and vegetables for three dollars each?

HONORING THE ARTIST: SIMON LEVENSON

If this week's cover, "How a Man Puts Up an Umbrella For a Woman," reminds us of a movie, it's supposed to. Its narrative nature not only catches our attention, but also reflects its artist's interests and expertise: The creator, Simon Levenson, is both a painter and a writer. And a film buff.

Mr. Levenson feels a deep commitment and connection to such endeavors. While he majored in writing at Sarah Lawrence College and, with a partner, has sold a concept for a movie to a major studio, he has been painting for quite a while.

He's been seeing films for a long time as well. (Citizen Kane is his favorite.) Watching movies is not just entertainment for Mr. Levenson, however. This makes sense, because it's a medium that combines both writing and art: language and visual imagery. Yet there's one aspect of film that's different from writing and painting: the latter arts are solitary activities, while film is collaborative.

Mr. Levenson prefers to work alone. "I miss it when I don't work by myself," he explains in his usual succinct and heartfelt way. "When I'm painting, for example, I can listen to my thoughts. I can realize the relationship between me and the canvas."

Mr. Levenson has sparked our imagination when he mentions "relationship." We want to hear more. "The painting process is like a relationship between a couple. Sometimes one person gives more than the other, but the more work you put into the relationship (and the act of creating), hopefully the more you should get back."

Similar to a relationship which works, painting makes Mr. Levenson feel good. "It doesn't make me feel exhilarated like it used to when I was younger," he notes. "Then I wanted to be exhilarated."

Despite his statement to the contrary, we can't help but sense that Mr. Levenson still gets "high" on life in general as well as his many diverse pursuits. For example, he seems honestly excited about teaching art to young children this fall at a private school in Manhattan.

He also speaks with gusto about commissioned portraits, some of which will hang in public places like New York University's School of Social Work. Mr. Levenson is equally animated about his recent trip to London, seeing a Cezanne exhibit ("for only ten minutes," he adds). Yet that experience stays in his mind, reminding him that Cezanne was the first artist he grew to know when he was just fourteen years old and living near the Met.

As a matter of fact, we're certain that many experiences remain with Mr. Levenson; he's a collector of all sorts of things, from conversations he hears, to cherished family memories.

But Mr. Levenson also collects ideas, and he's a person who's very much attached to the social / political world of today, thinking about how he can make things better.

The Scope Effect

The mingling of ocean and farmland, of woods and dunes has inspired artists for generations. The Hamptons have become an artists' Mecca, and this weekend this heritage will climax in a spectrum of events for those who appreciate art in its many forms.

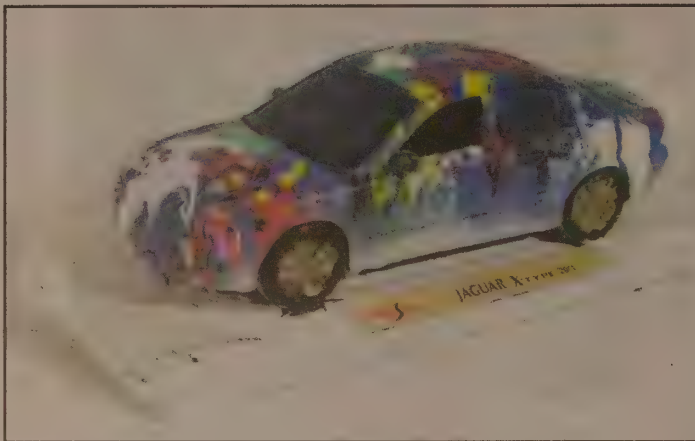

-scopeHamptons is finally here, and is sure to draw art lovers from near and far. -scope art fair has had success in New York, Los Angeles, Miami, and abroad since its first event in 2002. This unique exhibition works on the cutting edge of the art world, exposing up-and-coming artists in an original and casual manner.

For those here in time, Thursday night kicks off the art-lover's weekend with a party from 7-10 p.m. at the Sarah Nightingale Gallery, on Main Street in Water Mill. And then, let the games begin.

Along with 35 visiting galleries that will represent their artists at -scope are five local galleries: from Sara Nightingale (Water Mill), artist Ryan Wallace features his playful paintings; from The Drawing Room (East Hampton), Suzanne Bocanegra shares her creative pieces including fabrics and materials on paper; boltax gallery (Shelter Island) will represent Juan Doffo's fiery photography; Solar (East Hampton) features Lucia Pizzani with her photographic installation "Pendare," The Edsel Williams Fine Art Gallery (East Hampton) will display Wayne White's paintings that utilize words in art.

Each gallery will showcase one artist in 80% of their space, and will represent a combination of their other artists in the remainder of the space.

-scope is sponsored by Jaguar, PLI, Channing Daughters Vineyard, Hampton Luxury Liners, Guild

"Taking a Ride with the Big Cat" courtesy Gallery 10, by Brendan Murphy

Hall, The Parrish, and many others. Jaguar has taken it a step further to commission a dozen -scope artists to take a scale model of their luxury cars and transform them into works of art. They will be auctioned in the silent auction taking place all weekend.

-scope art fair will take place at Hampton Hall, which is at 230 Elm Street in Southampton, a short walk from the train station. Exhibitions are open from noon to 8 p.m. on July 15th, 16th, and 17th, and admission is $10.

Because of the major crowds that -scope is expected to draw and the extraordinary number of artists in the Hamptons, other artists and art galleries have planned events of their own to be held the same weekend. As a result, art lovers are going to be in seventh heaven from July 14-17.

Once you've made your rounds at -scope, the place to head is the main thoroughfare in Southampton Village. Coinciding with -scopeHamptons will be ARTspotting, which will utilize alternative spaces to showcase a diverse group of artists. Twenty-nine merchants around Southampton, including galleries, will be displaying the work of local artists. Also, as a part of ARTspotting, many of the Southampton galleries will have openings on Saturday, July 16th. Refreshments will be served and, in some cases, DJs will be spinning music. The Gayle Willson Gallery opens artist Marilyn Weiss's show from 4-7 p.m., the Hamilton Aguiar Fine Art gallery opens "Signs of Nature" from 7-11 p.m., the Jade Nectar East Gallery opens Lana Santorelli's work from 6-8 p.m., Michael Perez Pop Art Gallery will open Michael Perez's show from 6-9 p.m., and rvs Fine Art gallery opens an exhibition by Jeff Muhs from 6-9 p.m. All work displayed at all venues during ARTspotting is for sale.

Also on the menu for the art connoisseur is a Parallax exhibit, around the corner from -scope and a few hundred feet from the train station. At the Riverhead Building Supply site on Powell Road will be an installation of 8 local artists, each displayed in his/her own shipping container. There will be an entrance to these massive freight containers on one side and a translucent ceiling above, and the interior will showcase paintings, drawings, videos, and photographs. Parallax is a group of local artists who meet every few weeks to discuss each other's work, and they decided to take advantage of the -scope weekend and do something "a little out of the box," says founder and member Jane Martin.

Strolling the streets of Southampton should be reminiscent of long lazy ambles through the streets of Paris. The underutilized courtyards in the village each host beautiful fountains, and a wandering musician will grace the streets and plazas with his sweet songs. Also, with the newly adopted laws passed by Southampton that allow sidewalk dining, it will be an ideal locale to enjoy a leisurely meal between art-perusing.

Therapy Through Theatre

Kimberly Galway and Patricia Seitz met as fledgling actors in New York City over a decade ago. Since then, they both have newly defined careers as drama therapists and together they will open the Creative Therapy and Learning Center in Southampton this week. They are far from theater types gone awry, however. Both have many years of training behind them. After receiving their masters degrees from NYU, they each worked extensively as therapists in the mental health arena. Galway was the director of a mental health program in the city, as well as a therapist for New York Hospital and for an alternative school setting affiliated with St. Luke's/Roosevelt. Seitz worked with children with developmental delays and learning issues as well as with adults who suffered from mental illnesses and substance abuse. And they have credentials as impressive as their resumes.

The aim of the center is to provide a forum for the social, emotional and cognitive growth of children. Some of their clients may well suffer from developmental problems: they'll see children with learning delays, behavioral issues and emotional difficulties. But they'll also focus on improving the self-esteem of children who pass normal developmental milestones. Skill-building and personal growth are considered cornerstones of successful drama therapy.

Along with their eclectic clientele, the center will showcase an equally diverse therapeutic approach. According to Galway "drama therapy is kinesthetic, sensory, holistic." To this end, the sessions will include improvisation, role-play, movement, sound and gesture, puppetry and storytelling, though the techniques will be tailored to the needs of the individual child.

Galway and Seitz are keen to include the parents too. They'll offer support services for parents and caregivers which will include parent education and the development of creative play skills to help the parent help their child. "We want the parent to know it's okay to play with [their] kid and to act out aggressive themes," said Galway. Their goal is to host workshops for parents on how to play with their children so that each parent can foster the best growth possible for their child.

Drama therapy is considered a vital tool by those whose work involves child development. "It's particularly helpful for children since it's the natural way they work. You don't sit down with a 5 year old and say 'what are you afraid of?'" said Seitz. "Kids play things out a thousand times a day as a way of mastering their fears," added Galway. "We give them the tools to get back on track." Aside from helping children to sort out and express their fears, drama therapy also helps them to become more comfortable in their bodies, something which is especially important for children with sensory integration issues.

The therapy evolved from the experience and research of psychotherapists, teachers and theater professionals who recognized that alternatives to traditional verbal therapies were useful in allowing clients to confront, explore and work through problems and emotional difficulties. In successful cases, drama therapy enables children with social difficulties to make meaningful connections with others. Recent research has even suggested that interpersonal therapies, like drama therapy, can actually change the brain

Although their training involved a mixture of psychology, psychotherapy and drama, Galway and Seitz are not adverse to calling in other professionals where they feel it's needed. After a 3-4 week assessment period, the therapists may refer the child to a speech pathologist, occupational therapist or any other kind of auxiliary provider. They may even advocate family therapy if they believe some discord at home underlies the child's problems. According to their brochure, "a child's developing system is dependent on the way the social, emotional, cognitive and sensory domains operate and interact. Drama therapy offers an avenue to address each domain so that healthy integration is possible." It is in essence a playful, powerful approach that has been found to be effective with severely disturbed and disabled populations, but also with fostering personal growth in those without such difficulties.

Both Seitz and Galway are also mothers of small children. As a result, they are not only eyewitnesses to the inner workings of families with young kids but they have first-hand experience themselves. And like many others, they are juggling their professional lives with the responsibilities of parenting and partnering. Their insight into the stresses and tensions of modern living may well prove to be as useful as their training.

Play Ball!

There are athletics and there are sports. There are games and there are competitions. Fitting softball within such a category is not an easy thing to do. Although the existence of teams on the professional, college, high school and grade school levels make the sport an official aspect of the athletic world, softball is a whole world unto itself. It is a shame that the International Olympic Committee dropped softball (along with baseball) from the 2012 Summer Olympics. However, while it is summertime here in the United States, why should you comply with such international athletic policy anyway?

Be it your physical health or your social life, frequent participation in softball is a healthy addition to your summer agenda. During the summer of 2002, Dan's Papers formed its own softball team. The team was not a part of any particular league, but we did enjoy a few friendly match-ups at the Bridgehampton High School baseball field against teams representing such local businesses as Gurney's Inn and Marder's Nursery. The scores and statistical details of these games do not need to be discussed. However, the effects such games had for yours truly, among others, are worth sharing.

Although I did not feel as if I ran a marathon at the end of each game, I broke more than just a mild sweat (but not so much that I smelled like chicken broth) and felt my heart beating and lungs expanding at a fairly rapid pace. Sprinting around the bases after each hit, cutting from left to right in the infield, and dashing in spurting sprints both forward and backward in the outfield were temporary moments of great physical exercise. If you put all you have into every play that comes your way or every trip around the bases, you get a useful workout. Meanwhile, while waiting for each batter to come to the plate, you get a nice chance to catch your breath in between the more active moments.

Your arms get a sculpting exercise with the forceful swing of the heavy bat, and through the commanding throw of the large and (when compared to the average ball) semi-heavy softball. Your legs get some nice work themselves if you put all you have into the dash around the bases, the flight to make the diving catch, the sprint to get to the long pop-fly before it goes over your head, and the rush to give your teammate a high-five after a solid hit or impressive defensive play. The best softball players (while out in the field) usually run in place a bit before every pitch, readying themselves for wherever the ball may head next.

When I was neither on the field nor at bat, I managed to burn a few calories by shouting. Whether it was cheering for Dan as he – with the white beard, funky hat and whole getup on – turned the corner at first base after a line-drive down the third base line, or casually arguing with the umpire (who just so happened to be a member of Dan's Papers) over a call no one particularly cared for, I was passionately active. The louder I got, the louder everyone from both teams got as well, making the game that much more active and interesting.

Although I was not stopping by their house for dinner afterwards, I made some pleasant friendships with players of the other team in addition to strengthening the bonds I had with some Dan's Papers folks. Jeff Von Eissler was the executive chef at Gurney's Inn that summer. Anytime I saw him at the Montauk resort that summer, or even at his restaurant Quinn's a year later, we always exchanged a friendly nod and brief quip about anything from softball to cooking, fishing to the latest headlines. Meanwhile, Dan and I had our nice moment or two discussing strategy on the field and how confident we both were in getting on base, even though we both had trouble hitting the long ball.

The East End remains full of several softball leagues, but most of them have already begun so signing up is probably a little too late. But who needs leagues and all of their fancy rules and regulations anyway? Get your ball, bat and glove at places like Skidmore Sports in Hampton Bays or make a trip to K Mart before taking to the field. There are fields at all of the local high schools (from Westhampton to East Hampton), as well as several parks like Merrick Park in East Hampton and the field across from the movie theater in Montauk. ## Rejuvenations by Christina Poulos

My alarm chimed loudly at the early hour of 6 a.m. last Saturday. I jumped out of bed with a mixture of joy and anxiety. I had planned ahead, and dressed for this morning the night before, so after performing the morning basics, I slipped on a fresh pair of socks and laced up my running sneakers. I grabbed my bottle of Fiji water, and was out the door in a flash.

As I cruised down Montauk Highway in my red Honda, I was a little taken aback at the fact that there was no ridiculous morning traffic. It was great. The lonely road caused me to feel instantly relieved, and cleared away most of my anxiety. I had a feeling this was the start of an incredible day.

Michael Mansfield, waiting patiently next to his black Escalade, greeted me with an enthusiastic smile as I stepped out of my car with towel and water bottle in hand. Together we walked across the parking lot and down onto the beach, which gave way to a breath taking view of the Atlantic Ocean. We sat down in the sand, unlaced our sneakers, and started to warm up with a little light cardio. After running in place and simulating jump rope for a minute or so, Michael guided me through some quick stretches. It was then that I felt secure enough to come clean and admit to Michael that I hadn't had a truly challenging workout in months.

Side by side in the sand, Michael led me through his signature boot camp workout, which began with a few sets of pushups, crunches, and squats. The moves were all fairly challenging, yet refreshingly familiar to me. When I felt I needed a rest, Michael assured me that it was okay to drop out, and then get right back in whenever I was ready. He then incorporated into our boot camp workout a few short jogs down the beach, which left me a little winded. By facing the ocean and taking a few deep breaths, Michael showed me a great way to calm my breath, and I was quickly able to get right back into our workout.

The upper body part of the workout was fun. Michael broke out a set of rubber resistance bands, which are great, because you can instantly adjust the resistance to your own level of strength. He led me through a few sets of bicep curls, and then we worked my triceps and back, by looping the band around the side of the lifeguard stand.

Before I knew it, our hour-long workout had ended. To my surprise, there was no yelling, no tears, and no falling over in the sand in exhaustion.

Michael Mansfield, certified ISSA trainer, is a life-long athlete. He keeps his body buff with his Lean Body Boot Camp Workouts at the beach, surfing, playing soccer, and martial arts. Michael has training experience with Japanese martial arts masters, professional German soccer coaches, and ex-Navy SEALs, and is passionate about helping his clients develop a new, healthier relationship with their bodies. Michael is truly committed to showing people how to lead a healthy lifestyle, and has developed a unique plan to show people how to safely and efficiently turn fat into lean muscle mass.

Michael Mansfield had revealed to me the beginning of a wonderful plan to change not only my body, but my mind and metabolism as well. I felt awesome - alive and full of energy as I headed home. (And still, no traffic on Montauk Highway!) When I arrived home, I threw on some tunes and cleaned my entire apartment - closets and all. I even had the sudden urge and strength to move furniture around, clean my car, pay some of my bills, and do laundry. I accomplished more that day than I ever have before on a Saturday.

If you'd like to check out Michael Mansfield's next Boot Camp Workout on the beach, head down to Georgica Beach Saturdays and Sundays at 8 a.m. His Lean Body Boot Camp Workouts are great for both beginners and advanced, and are reasonably priced: $40 for 1 session, or $120 for 4! Michael also offers private cardio/ sculpt training sessions from his West village studio in Manhattan, right near Washington Square Park.

Vine Country

Driving down the road heading toward Westhampton's beautiful beach, there is this one home that catches my eye every single time. The only way I can describe it is to say "rustic." There is something so country and serene about the house. Maybe it's the light wood that encases the entire home, or the dark green shutters. Perhaps it's the white picket fence that surrounds the front, or the beautiful lilies peeking out of the slats. I think it's most likely the wooden arch that's in front of the home with the clinging, flowering vine climbing up and weaving throughout.

Vines can enhance and add color to any site. They are best displayed on some sort of supporting frame, whether it be an arch, railing, roof, side of a house, mailbox post, trellis or tree. Vines love to cling and as they cling, they stretch, grow and climb their way to the top. In my mom's backyard, there is a beautiful maple tree. When I was a child, I remember my mother taking a small ivy cutting and planting near the base of the tree. I watched over the years as the ivy grew and now the tree is beautifully enhanced and covered in the spectacular vine.

There are many vines which are able to live, grow and flourish on Long Island. Flowering vines are spectacular. According to Cornell Cooperative Extension (www.cce.cornell.edu) the following are vines that flourish in the late summer and fall. These plants can still be found at your local nursery. The ones listed are perennials.

- Clematis hybrids
  - Clematis texensis "Dutchess of Albany"
  - Silver Lace Vine
  - Schizophragma hydrangeoides

• Clematis paniculata

It is important to determine where you are going to put your vine before planting. Flowering vines should be put in at least partial sunlight and will thrive near porches or patios. Tall growing vines such as grapes or wisteria grow happily on a larger arbor and require some shade. Isn't it incredible to drive out to Long Island's wine country and see the grapes growing on the vines? We are lucky that our climate is comparable to the climate of France, which allows the grapes to have a 220-day growing season.

Pelligrini Vineyards has over 30 acres of vineyards. They state that having denser than normal vine spacing helps with the soil's nutrients and allows the vines to maximize the grape clusters. (There honestly is nothing more spectacular than knowing that your Chardonnay or Chablis was made with grapes grown right here. Anyone who visits Long Island's wine country leaves here with a lasting impression of our vineyards and a delicious souvenir of fine wine.

Some vines climb and cling by their tendrils. Tendrils are stems without leaves that twirl around anything that they come in contact with. Honeysuckle and wisteria are "twirlers," using their stems to grow taller. These types of vines do best on trellises and arbors, as they need the support. Vines such as ivy use their roots to anchor themselves to surfaces such as brick or wood and continue to grow up the surface. Ivy grows like wildfire. It's a great vine to use if you want quick and beautiful coverage of a damaged fixture or area.

Vines should be grown in moist soil with good drainage and they require good pruning to keep them in top growing condition. Think Christmas lights – if one light is out it will affect the whole strand. This is true for vines as well. If a part is damaged, growth and the overall beauty of the vine will be impaired.

Wisteria is truly one of my favorite vines. I was amazed to find out that wisteria can grow to 65 feet tall and showcase a beautiful array of bluish purple flowers. What's interesting about wisteria is that it could take as long as 7 to 15 years to get your first flowers, but when they do bloom, it is so worth it. They are amazing to look at. Wisteria was used around the trellis of the inn where my husband and I got married in an outdoor ceremony. The hanging flower, suspended off the vine, looks absolutely beautiful in pictures.

So if you are thinking of adding an "Ivy League" flavor to your home or garden, look no further than adding vines to your garden to create a whole new 3-dimensional look.

Fire Breathing Super Fly

And there is no better place to be a self-confessed dragonfly enthusiast than on the East End. The island is blessed with more than 90 species of dragonflies, from ebony jewel wings with their iridescent green bodies, to corporals and dancers, sprites and sand dragons. Currently, there are at least 9 different types of dragonflies that can only be found on Long Island, three of which are on New York State's endangered species list.

Worldwide, there are over 6,500 species of dragonfly, each with its own distinctive coloring and flight patterns. With its lineage actually predating the dinosaurs, these prehistoric creatures' primitive wingspan is so effective it actually permits them to fly both forwards and backwards and also hover like a helicopter.

Because dragonflies are so prevalent on Long Island, it is no surprise that there seem to be dozens wherever you go. Yes, I admit they may hover around the food and dip at barbecues a bit too frequently and are often whizzing by our ears at startling rates, but it is important to give our little fluttering friends the respect they deserve. In fact, instead of constant complaints about how dragonflies seem to be "everywhere," we should instead be singing their praises.

Like most of their reptilian ancestors, dragonflies are avid predators with ferocious appetites. And although totally harmless to humans, the dragonflies' diet, which consists of insects like moths, gnats, and mosquitoes, makes them an instant (and free) bug repellent.

Although dragonflies spend their adult lives speedily dancing through the air and chasing those dreaded mosquitoes, their life begins wingless and in an aquatic, muddy environment. They breathe through gills and hardly resemble the speedy winged creatures they will one day become. Although wingless, young dragonflies are no less fierce; they survive by camouflage and use a jet propulsion system to ambush small fish, insects or sometimes even each other. Their unusual aging process continues as the dragonfly sheds about 15 times before emerging into its final stage of adulthood. During its final stage, the dragonfly actually crawls from the water and makes an almost evolutionary journey onto land, where it sheds its last layer of skin, spreads its newly developed wings and prepares for a difficult and intense life of insect hunting.

Because of their unusual life-cycles and strange, lean and colorful bodies, dragonflies have been called many things throughout the centuries – from the "devil's darning needles" and "water witches," to "snake doctors" and "horse stingers" – there is no end to the images these flighty predators provoke. And although not gigantic or fire-breathing, whenever I see one of those winged, ancient creatures zip across a pond on a lazy summer day, it is easy to understand why they retained my interest while other, lesser insects did not. Yes, although they may not be fire breathing or more than an inch or two long, these prehistoric and mystical creatures definitely have earned the name dragonfly, at least in my book.

Something to Write Home About

An odd thing happened to me the other week – my friend joined the Army. At first, I didn't think this would be that strange an experience; people join the Army every day. What caught my attention, though, was the e-mail that I received a few days after she left. The e-mail was from her parents and explained that she had turned in her cell phone upon entering basic training camp, and would also have no Internet access for who knows how long. The email then went on to give me her mailing address. Mailing address? What the heck was I supposed to do with that? It was then that I rediscovered the long lost art of letter writing.

I'm not by any means "old," but I do remember the days when e-mail wasn't around and nobody knew what a mobile phone was. It was then that I went to summer camp and sat down on my bunk once a week to write a letter home to my parents. It was also then that when you met someone and really liked them, you exchanged home phone numbers and addresses. Addresses that you wrote postcards and letters to, as a way to keep in touch. Instant phone or e-mail gratification was a dream of the future.

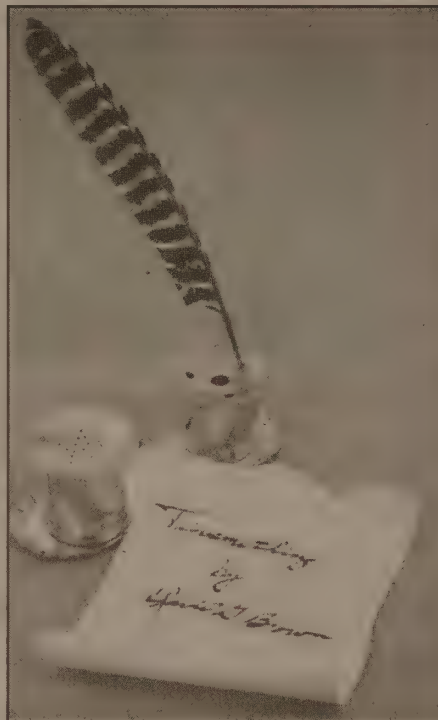

This did all happen tens of years ago, and being presented with this new "old fashioned" way of keeping in touch with my friend, I decided it was time to brush the dust off my arsenal of stationery that had been collected over years of Christmases and birthdays. What I found was astounding: there are so many types of letter writing paper and utensils to choose from; keeping in touch can not only be worthwhile for maintaining friendships, but also as a form

To write a letter, first and foremost you will need some sort of paper to write it on. When it comes down to it, any type of paper will do, but that's just not very much fun, now is it? For the more practical types, you have your basic run of school yard notebook paper, unlined computer paper, torn out spiral paper, things that you could find in any office supply store (or your child's backpack). Moving on to a little more letter-specific paper, you have "airmail" paper, which is very thin and unlined and comes with special envelopes already pre-marked and ready to be sent overseas. You can also buy this thin parchment paper without the airmail requirements and use it for more local mailings.

Getting even more fanciful, you can buy coordinated stationery sets. These generally come in boxes or folders that contain varied sizes of writing paper along with matching envelopes. You can choose from several hundreds of thousands of prints, pictures, or patterns on the paper and/or envelope lining, or even personalize the whole set with your own monograms. Because of the varied sizes of paper that come in these sets, they are scripturally versatile and can be used interchangeably between your run-of-the-mill thank-you notes and your long paragraphs of prose to your best friend who is off serving her country. When picking your stationery, it is important to consider the message that it will be sending about yourself.

Now we've got ourselves some paper, and we may already have an idea of whom we are writing to, but what will we use to write? To help link modern day with the letter-writing days of yore, I will associate choice of writing utensil with something you may already be more familiar with: computers. When choosing a font on the computer, you must consider several options: legibility, size, color, and the overall style factor. This is exactly what you must do when writing a letter. Consider your audience. Just as you wouldn't use the scrawling pageant style font to write a casual e-mail to your sister, you wouldn't buy a calligraphy set and draft her a 17th century work of art in a simple catch-up letter. You have a wide assortment of writing accoutrements available, ranging from the ever-casual crayon and colored pencils to the ultra-sophisticated fountain pen or inkwell. The more artistic the writing part of the letter becomes, the more time you will spend on it. This will be evident when the recipient opens the envelope, and appreciation will follow suit.

As with any good essay, story, or other written product, do not neglect to spend time on the content of the letter. It can give off a fine first impression, but your letter should "say" something to its recipient. Contrary to the age-old saying, what is important here is what you say, not how you say it.

So venture into that bottom desk drawer and rustle up that stationery that your parents gave you when you were twelve and refused to write a letter to Great Aunt Susan. Surprise a friend or relative. Letters; they're not just a relic from the past anymore.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Majestic Delphiniums

Sometimes the idea of plants brings to mind the image of a perfect specimen. To me, there is no better image than spires of delphiniums interspersed among garden beds. At Rock Cottage, we have numerous groupings of these majestic flowers.

Delphiniums are an old-fashioned perennial that is a favorite in English gardens. They come from a family of plants named Ranunculaceae. This family includes both annuals and perennials. Wild delphiniums probably originated in Europe, Siberia, Syria, and India, where they grow in forest clearings. The delphiniums in today's gardens are hybrids that evolved from four species: Delphinium elatum, Delphinium grandiflorum, Delphinium exaltatum, and Delphinium formosum. Hybridization began sometime in the late 1800s – and gardeners have been enjoying the luscious flowers and colors ever since.

The flower spikes, that may be single- or double-flowered, come in shades of blue, lavender, white, pink, red, violet, and yellow. Many of the flowers have white or black centers (called "bees"). The flowers grow in magnificent spikes with numerous flowers on each spike. Flower spikes may range in height from two feet to six or eight feet tall. They are ideal at the backs of borders or in groupings to punctuate flower beds.

Delphiniums are heavy feeders and require deeply cultivated, fertile, and moist soil that is well-drained. Soil containing decayed manure and compost mixed in the lower soil, and bone meal or lime mixed in the upper layer of soil is best (the plants prefer a somewhat alkaline soil type). During the growing season, a covering of well-rotted manure after the first flowering promotes a second flowering in the fall.

Seeds can be planted in the spring after all danger of frost, or in the fall before the first frost. Seeds need to be sprinkled where they will grow (delphiniums, like poppies, do not like to be transplanted). Cover the seeds with no more than 1/8-inch of soil. Chilling seeds overnight in the refrigerator before planting promotes germination which takes about three or four weeks.

Delphiniums are susceptible to the attack of slugs, especially if the weather is damp or wet. To avoid damage, place fireplace ashes around the shoots to protect them. A mixture of equal parts copper sulphate and hydrated lime placed on the soil around, but not touching, the plants also protects them.

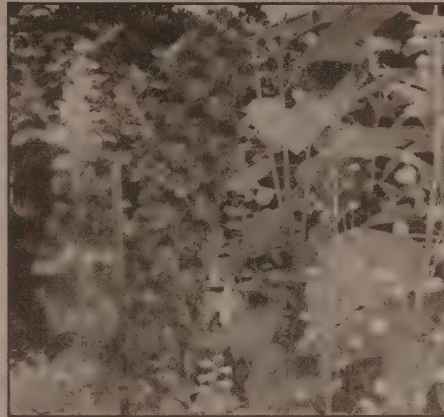

The plants are top heavy so need to be located where they are protected from strong winds. Stake the plants to prevent the hollow flower stems from breaking. Delphiniums do best in full sun, though a site with five hours of sun in early summer also works.

Flower shoots need to be thinned to two or three on young plants, and five to seven on well-established plants to promote higher quality, large flowers. When the flowers die, spikes can be cut back to the smaller, branching side shoots. This procedure, and adequate water/fertilizer will produce a second, smaller crop of flowers in late summer or fall.

As with most perennials, delphiniums need to be cut back nearly to the ground after the first frost. Unfortunately, delphiniums typically die back after two or three years and may need to be replaced at that time. It is important, therefore, to plant seeds on a continuing basis to keep a garden well-populated with these flowers.

Some of the newer hybrids to look for include "Black Knight," a deep, midnight blue that grows to six feet tall; "Blue Bird," with medium-blue flowers and white bees to six feet; "Pacific Giants" with blue, violet, or pink flowers to eight feet tall; "Bellamosa," a dark gentian blue to four feet tall; "Snow White," a white flower to three feet tall; and "Laurin," a lovely orange-red to about three feet tall.

In addition to slugs, delphiniums can suffer from a number of pests. Powdery mildew, black leaf spot, Botrytis blight, crown rot, and other fungal spots are common with delphiniums. Aphids, leaf miners, and mites are also common. While general purpose fungicides and insecticides help, the best way to avoid problems is prevention. Locate delphiniums in well-drained sites and practice good sanitation by destroying dying or decaying plant debris. If problems occur with crown or root rot, start new plants in another garden location. Never divide or propagate plants with infected plant stock.

Delphiniums are one of the highest recommendations on our list of garden plants. Their enchanting, stately flowers make a spectacular garden display and add an old world sophistication that few flowers are able to achieve. While not the easiest flower to grow, delphiniums are well worth considering in every garden on the East End.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Real Estate offices continue to spread out over the East End. Just recently Real Hamptons Realty of Westhampton Beach spread their wings into Southampton. The new satellite office is located on Culver Street in Southampton Village. Broker Robert Scribner, who now shares the second location with Hamptons architect Bruce Nagel, says that because he and Mr. Nagel already shared numerous clients in the area, it made sense to come together. Mr. Scribner, who has been selling & renting real estate in the Hamptons for many years, is enjoying a busy summer season and just recently sold an oceanfront on Dune Road in Westhampton Beach for $3 million. The beach house is set in the dunes and is located between the two bridges.

Allan M. Schneider is now on Main Street in Montauk, and one of the town's smaller agencies, Sea and Sun, which was located at the entrance of town by the IGA, has packed up and moved down the street to join them. Prudential Douglas Elliman has taken up residence down by the Montauk train station across from the old Montauk Manor Playhouse, in what once was called Atlantic East.

Prudential Douglas Elliman just recently listed an Amagansett ocean view farm at $40 million. The property includes 24 acres and a 7500 sq ft post-and-beam home and equestrian facility that includes a 12-stall barn as well as 6 sleeping suites and 7.5 baths. The home has two observation cupolas that look out to the ocean and has wired plank wood floors for hydronic heat. This exceptional piece of real estate now joins the list of "most valuable" properties on the East End market today. In East Hampton, there is a very impressive landmark building on the corner of Main Street in the heart of town that once housed a bank and it is now Allan M. Schneider as well. The Corcoran Group now has 16 offices from Hampton Bays to Amagansett.

Harris Brown Stevens is another corporate realtor that has spread out through all the Hamptons as well as Shelter Island. Their Cutchogue office recently brought the buyer to a $5.7 million dollar deal in Paradise Point. The Southold property was originally listed for $6,750,000 with Prudential's Mattituck office last year. The property consisted of a 3500 sq ft 1960s ranch on six acres on the Peconic Bay.

Hamptons Realty Group is comprised of five independent real estate firms that joined together to form one company. This Fourth of July they celebrated their one-year anniversary and are thrilled with the success of their merger. They too have just opened another office in Hampton Bays. The group is comprised of four of the most seasoned real estate professionals on the East End. Htun Han, principal broker of their Main Street Amagansett office, says becoming part of Hamptons Realty group has substantially increased his business. Stan Esposito, in the East Hampton office, reports that they are thriving among the national and Manhattan-based firms while remaining locally owned and operated.

There are still many small agencies that stand on their own, such as John Keeshan and Martha Green in Montauk. These offices represent landmark realtors who have been out east broking sales & rentals for many years. On Shelter Island, there is Georgia B. Ketchum and in East Hampton Devlin McNiff: both are yet to go corporate, although most other area realtors have been bought out or have expanded. This has been happening steadily over the past two years. Many of the brokers stay in place or are given new titles and positions within their prospective firms. For many it has worked well and the client base has definitely increased as a result. Most brokers have had a great year and their only complaint is that there just is not enough out there on the market to go around.

TRUE FACTS OF REAL ESTATE

by Karen True

Corcoran Group, Palm Beach, FL

THE FINE PRINT!

Have you ever read one of those travel agency ads that offer seven days six nights in Paradise for a package price of $399? You may have also noticed the fine print in the ad: Airport transfers, taxes, tips, and departure tax not included. Although the basic cost of the trip is $399, there are other charges that must also be paid.

Buying a home also includes many out-of-pocket expenses beyond the agreed purchase price. While the down payment may be the largest expense attached to a home purchase, ask the real estate agent to provide an itemized list of other fees and expenses required to consummate the transaction, so that you don't experience any surprises.

Depending on the mortgage plan chosen, other charges may include: 1) loan origination fees, 2) advance deposits for taxes and insurance, 3) mortgage insurance fees, 4) recording fees, 5) fees for credit reports and appraisals required upon loan application, and 6) discount points. Some fees are figured as a percentage of the purchase price or loan amount, while others are a flat amount.

Only the closing attorney can calculate the exact amount needed to complete the transaction, but buyers should expect to receive an estimate of those costs for planning purposes from the real estate agent. Armed in advance with the necessary figures, buyers can plan their purchase with confidence.

LIGHT CONTROL

Dear Dan,

It's exciting to think that we could have an observatory here on the South Fork. The photograph in your story was of the Custer Institute, a popular Observatory in Southold.

However, the East Hampton Town Board needs to pass a comprehensive lighting code that "retires" the bad lighting, installed without concern for light trespass, glare, and "up" lighting. That may not happen without public support. The Town itself is changing all their own lights, saving energy at the same time.

Thank you.

A WHALE WHOPPER

Dear Dan,

Thought you might like to know that one of our supporters came up to me at a recent show and told me how she got into a pretty heated debate with her husband about last month's whale story.

Her charming hubby tried telling her that the festival was made up and she said, "No way it MUST have happened because Nancy Atlas played at it!"

After telling her the truth (that the festival was actually just a backyard get together with old hubs and one course: Smoke Whale Pie) we all had a good laugh and talked about the recent Ecuadorian Eel sighting in Block Island.

Rock it.

Nancy Atlas
Via e-mail

P.S. Don't you think we should close off the Sag Harbor Bridge during Sag Harborfest this year and have a good old fashion European style shindig on it with accordion player and local merchants? The bridge is so damn beautiful it should be celebrated! (Lord knows they can close it for a day as they shut it down for two YEARS when it was being rebuilt.)

They could serve aperitifs and espresso. – DR

Working For You

It's one a.m. on Tuesday at Dan's,
It's hot and it's muggy, we're thankful for fans.
We're here through the night to complete our large task,

But what could take us this long you might ask.
Just the thought of it might bring our own Dan to tears,

Yes, it's our largest edition in 45 years.
Nicole J. will not kiss her young son goodnight,
She's staying to make sure every ad looks just right.

Lauren and Nicole C. will see the sun rise,
Until the layout is flawless, they won't close their eyes.

Leslie Ernst and her sales staff place every client they can,
With Tom, Catherine, Kathy, Bob, Jim, Jean and Anne.

Robin edits the stories we bring you each week,
The words of Emily, Kelly, Christian and Christina she tweaks.

Dan touches your senses with his love of this place,

Then takes you along with style and grace.
For 45 years he's invited you in,
We hope 45 more; today he'll begin.

So if it's late and our light's on as you're passing through,

Know that we're still here, and as always working for you.

BLOWN AWAY

Dear Dan,

RE: Lowenstein House

On our way to visit friends on Jessup Lane, in a convertible, it suddenly started to rain house insulation. We didn't hear any explosion (radio blasting), but we were just past the front gates when we realized that something was wrong. My husband pulled over, and ran inside the gates. Immediately after the blast, there was no way of knowing what had happened. As I stood on the side of the road, I watched people jump out of their cars, run from backyard pool parties in swimsuits, not thinking twice about danger, enter the property to help. When the fire department arrived, all of the people were asked to leave. Of course, I don't know any of those people, but I would like them all to know their bravery did not go unnoticed. These are the neighbors we should all wish to have!

FRUITY FAMILY

Dear Dan,

About a year ago I had written you regarding a simply fabulous documentary called Watermarks which I thought would be of great interest for your movie festival. I am sure you meanwhile saw it. It was researched, written and produced by Mr. Yaron Zilberman from Israel. Press contact in New York is Kino International, Mr. R., Brandao, 333 West 39 Street, New York, 10018 and it was shown here just a few times but not really commercially.

Last but not least, I read in your publication of June 17 the article about Phoebe Legere by your son David. I never miss anything he has to say about the world. Like father, like son, he is great. He has inherited your gift for writing, even has your style. You two must have a lot of fun together.

Best regards.

Maren Friedberg

Police Blotter

Couch Potato

There's nothing worse than waking up with a strange woman in your house, especially if she slept over uninvited. A Montauk resident was unsettled when he woke up at 11 a.m. and found a 53-year-old woman from Bridgehampton asleep on his couch. Positive that he had gone home alone the night before, the man called local authorities. After being arraigned later that afternoon, the woman was released on her own recognizance.

Borrowing Breakfast

An unidentified woman wearing a strapless blue terry cloth dress helped herself to a continental breakfast at the store Willow in Montauk. Under the presumption that the shop provided customers with complimentary meals, she used her purse as a doggy bag to take home three jars of jam, pancake mix and chocolate sprinkles. The breakfast bandit has yet to be apprehended.

All Mixed Up

A music producer from Accabonac Road, East Hampton, was surprised to find fifteen thousand dollars worth of recording equipment, including two soundboard mixers, missing from his locked storage unit at Goodfriend Self Storage. There was no sign of forced entry and only one other person had a key to the locker, leading the victim to consider a connection.

Police are tracking down leads, but have yet to charge anyone.

Hot and Bothered

It's always refreshing to sit back and relax in a Jacuzzi after working all day, even if you don't own one. A Montauk man was disturbed to find the lock to his hot tub broken, and someone else's hair floating in the water. Police were unable to determine whether the steamy suspect was male or female, but the home-owner had the tub cleaned for good measure.

Booze Blues

A 35-year-old man from Southampton was having such a great time at the Haven nightclub in Sag Harbor, that before leaving he decided to bring some "party favors" for the ride home. Police said he was seen removing several cases of beer from a storage locker behind the club, and loading them into his car. The beer burglar thought it was open bar all night inside and out of Haven, entitling him to stockpile a trunk full of alcohol. Sag Harbor village police returned the beer to its rightful owner and charged the suspect with petit larceny and trespassing in the third degree.

ceny and trespassing in the third degree.

Warm Up Robbery

Burglars training for a long season of thievery held a practice run at a man's house on Louse Point Road in Springs. According to the caretaker responsible for the house, the people utilized several points of entry in an effort to boost their trespassing efficiency. They cut screens off the kitchen door and a window before moving onto advanced levels of entry by removing an air conditioning unit out of the pantry window. Although $250 worth of damage was done, the criminals decided they weren't ready to steal anything and moved on.

Modern Art

Creative scoundrels took it upon themselves to customize an Amagansett family's house with paintball guns. After hearing sounds of paint splattering against their house at 7 a.m., the residents notified police who arrived shortly after. On top of receiving a free paint job, the family also was lucky enough to have two tires on their car slashed.
